The New Barwis-Holliday Award for Far Eastern Studies

Edward Barwis-Holliday instituted an annual monetary award for Far Eastern Studies in the early 1980s. His purpose was to promote research into the anthropology, art, history, literature or religion of Japan, China, Korea or the eastern regions of the then Soviet Union. British universities with Oriental Faculties were informed of the initiative and the first award, of £100, was made in 1981 for a paper entitled, On the transmission of the Shen Tzu and the Yang-sheng yao-chi.

In January 2001 the Publications Committee of Royal Asiatic Society agreed to update the award to £250. Universities throughout the English-speaking world are now informed and submissions to the first two New Awards were received from seven different countries. The first New Award went to David Prager Branner of the University of Maryland for his article, On early Chinese morphology and its intellectual history. William South Coblin of the University of Iowa was the recipient of the second New Award for his article Robert Morrison and the phonology of Mid-Qing Mandarin. James Hunlley Grayson has been awarded the third New Award. The Fourth has gone to Richard John Lynn.

Scholars are invited to submit papers on the topics listed above. Award-winning and short-listed entries will be published in the Society's Journal, within the usual format. No rigid limit is imposed on the length of the contribution but it should be appreciated that the most suitable length is deemed to be around 6,000 words.

Papers should be in 'hard copy' on A4 sheets with double line-spacing accompanied by a CD or a floppy disk. Alternatively scholars may submit by email attachment as long as text is double-spaced and a postal address supplied.

Postal Submissions should be addressed to the Barwis-Holliday 6th Award, Charlotte de Blois, Royal Asiatic Society, 14 Stephenson Way, London NW1 2HD, by 31st December, 2008.

Electronic Submissions should be sent to cdb@royalasiaticsociety.org subject 'Barwis-Holliday Award'

Further JRAS Awards

The Professor Mary Boyce Prize for an Article relating to the study of religion in Asia: £250. The Royal Asiatic Society will again be awarding the Boyce prize for articles relating to the study of religion in Asia. Award winning submissions will be published in the Society's peer-reviewed Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society which, since 1834, has provided a forum for scholarly articles of the highest quality on South Asia, the Middle East (together with North Africa and Ethiopia), Central Asia, East Asia and South-East Asia. The focus of the prize is any religion, anywhere in Asia and at any time, and the Society's main aim is to encourage the submission of pieces of research that make innovative contributions to understanding and learning within their fields.

The Sir George Staunton Prize for an article by a young scholar: £250. It will also be awarding, for a second time, the Staunton Prize; a new prize for essays produced by young scholars ('young scholar' being defined as either someone in the process of completing their PhD or someone who has been awarded their doctorate within the last five years) working on the history, archaeology, literature, language, religion, anthropology and art of Asia. The focus is not limited to any specific region within Asia or to any particular discipline, thus reflecting the broad remit of the Society's activities and interests. Award winning submissions will be published in the Society's peer-reviewed Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society.
