RYŌKAN

Zen Monk-Poet of Japan

BURTON WATSON, Editor and Translator

A respected author and translator now makes available to western readers the work of the Buddhist monk and recluse who was a major figure in Tokugawa poetry. Mainly a record of Ryōkan's daily activities, these representative works reveal both an uncommon poet and a highly unusual personality capable of enjoying a rich spiritual life in the midst of poverty.

THE ORIGINS OF THE COLD WAR IN ASIA

YŌNOSUKE NAGAI and AKIRA IRIYE, Editors

In this volume sixteen leading scholars from Japan, the United States, and Great Britain provide the first comprehensive account of the cold war in Asia. Profiting from the recent partial opening of government archives, the essays suggest a situation in Asia after World War II substantially different from a bilateral conflict of opposing ideologies.

Crime and Punishment in Medieval Chinese Drama

Three Judge Pao Plays of the Yuan and Ming Dynasties

George A. Hayden, Translator

George A. Hayden translates three Judge Pao plays: "Selling Rice at Ch'ien-chu," "The Ghost of the Pot," and "The Flower in the Back Courtyard." Hayden explains the structure of the dramas which were sung and spoken, and their moral significance in light of Chinese ethics. He also traces the legend of Judge Pao through the years to its high point in Yuan and early Ming drama. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 82 $15.00

Tribute and Profit

Sino-Siamese Trade, 1652-1853

Sarasin Viraphol

In this first study of Sino-Siamese trade during the Ch'ing dynasty (1644-1911), Sarasin Viraphol portrays the Siamese adroitness in exploring tributary relations with China for commercial ends. The author also examines sea trade among Japan, China, and Siam in the seventeenth century, the role of Siamese rice exportation in the eighteenth century, and Chinese immigration and its impact on trading patterns. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 76 $15.00

The Ch'ing Imperial Household Department

A Study of its Organization and Principal Functions, 1662-1796

Preston M. Torbert

Focusing on a significant but previously neglected institution, Mr. Torbert illuminates many aspects of mid-Ch'ing government, including the tributary system, financial administration, foreign trade and the memorial system. One chapter describes in detail a major case of official corruption from the late Ch'ien-lung era which captures the tenor of government administration at the height of Ch'ing wealth, power, and prestige. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 71 $15.00

The Dewey Experiment in China

Educational Reform and Political Power in the Early Republic

Barry Keenan

The Dewey Experiment in China analyzes the careers and writings of John Dewey's followers through the 1920s—particularly Kuo Ping-wen, Chiang Meng-lin, and T'ao Hsing-chih—as they attempted to implement Dewey's political reform ideas and his progressive educational principles. This study reflects not only upon Dewey's own thought but upon the fragility of many American ideas assumed to have been applicable again after World War II in China and South-east Asia. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 81 $15.00

The Archaeology of Ancient China

Third edition, revised and enlarged

Kwang-chih Chang

In this new and enlarged edition, K.C. Chang extends his basic thesis of an indigenous development of Chinese civilization to new horizons and evaluates the latest archaeological information that has become available—in particular, the radiocarbon dates announced since 1972 and the important discoveries made outside the nuclear area of North China. Archaeologists and world historians alike will find the present volume essential to their understanding of ancient China. 222 illus.

Up to the Mountains and Down to the Villages

The Transfer of Youth from Urban to Rural China

Thomas P. Bernstein

Between 1968 and 1975 the People's Republic of China sent twelve million urban middle and secondary school graduates to the countryside, evidently for life, in an effort to control urban growth and spur rural development. In the first detailed analysis of the program by a Western scholar, Bernstein presents carefully documented information on what has undoubtedly been one of the largest social experiments of this century in any country. Southeast Asia

A History

LEA E. WILLIAMS, Brown University

After briefly surveying the early history of Southeast Asia, Professor Williams focuses on the modern period in a lively narrative centered on historical themes rather than on individuals and events. He chronicles the spread of Islam, the conquest by Western colonial powers, and the recent past: Japan's attempt at hegemony; the European attempt to reimpose colonialism after World War II and its rejection by nationalists; and the role of the United States, especially in Indochina and the Philippines. Williams illustrates how the peoples of tropical East Asia have been caught up in the same broad historical currents, and depicts the region as an arena of struggle from the time of pre-historic folk migrations.

Nakahara

Family Farming and Population in a Japanese Village, 1717–1830

Thomas C. Smith. Historians have long been intrigued by Japan's static national population during the 18th and early 19th centuries, when the output of the economy was almost certainly growing. Was population held in check by high mortality or low fertility, or by some combination of the two? The author of this classic case study suggests an answer through analysis of certain heretofore unperceived rural marriage and child-bearing patterns. $10.00

Chang Tso-lin in Northeast China, 1911–1928

China, Japan, and the Manchurian Idea

Gavan McCormack. Drawn against the background of Japanese imperialism in Republican China, this is an account of the career of the most powerful Chinese warlord of his time. It focuses on Chang's struggle with Japan for control over the military, social, and industrial development of Northeast China. His success in retaining power until his assassination in 1928 is attributed to three factors: Northeast China's immense wealth, its favorable position in strategic terms, and the efficiency of Chang's civil administration. $16.50

REVOLUTION AT WORK

Mobilization Campaigns in China

By CHARLES P. CELL

A Volume in the STUDIES IN SOCIAL DISCONTINUITY Series

This book presents the first quantitative research on China's mobilization campaigns. Using the best available data, it derives values for level of mobilization, achievements, and shortcomings of 36 selected campaigns. It uses these values to rate the utility for China's socialist transformation process of the three basic types of campaings: economic, ideological, and struggle. Surprisingly, it finds economic campaigns (with the Great Leap Forward as one of the few exceptions) to be the most efficient, and struggle campaigns to be least. It also provides historical and theoretical background on the campaigns, and discusses their future in the wake of Mao's death.

RURAL SMALL—SCALE INDUSTRY IN THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

Edited by Dwight Perkins

In the summer of 1975, a delegation of scholars and technologists toured fifty factories and ten communes on mainland China. The team's observations constitute the Western world's first look at small-scale industry, regarded as an interim step in the modernization of industrial China.

"A consistently intelligent and illuminating report . . . highly recommended."

THE FOREIGN TRADE OF CHINA

Policy, Law, and Practice

Gene T. Hsiao

An important aspect of Hsiao's investigation of Chinese foreign trade is its emphasis on contemporary economic and political realities. This multifaceted study should interest students of international law, politics, and economics as well as businessmen contemplating trade with China.

CHINESE—ENGLISH DICTIONARY OF CONTEMPORARY USAGE

Compiled by Wen-shun Chi

Assisted by Chi-ping Chen, Mei Hsia T. Huang, and John S. Service

Chinese, like other living languages, constantly develops a multitude of new terms and phrases. In the People's Republic of China, the politicization of almost every aspect of life has accelerated language change. This volume of more than 20,000 terms assumes that the user will already have acquired a foundation in "traditional" Chinese. It should be a valuable supplement to the older, standard Chinese-English dictionaries.

AJANTA

Its Place in Buddhist Art

Sheila L. Weiner

Ajanta—the only extant site of such grandeur to combine painting, sculpture, and architecture—still puzzles scholars. Weiner examines historical, inscriptional, numismatic, and stylistic evidence both in relation to other sites and in the light of the development of Buddhist thought. She discusses the development of areas of worship in relation to the role of the Buddha image and provides an analysis of the effect of the Buddha image upon the narrative tradition in Buddhist art.

中英
對照 老子章句新編A RECONSTRUCTED LAO TZU
WITH ENGLISH TRANSLATION

compiled by Prof. Yen Lin-feng

Lao Tzu 老子, or Tao te ching 道德經, was composed by the renowned philosopher and founder of Taoism—Lao Tzu. Like many ancient texts, it has not escaped the revages of time, and many commentators have expressed the belief that certain characters and phrases have been misplaced or corrupted through the long history of its transmission.

Professor Yen has made a comprehensive study and evaluation of all the available emendations of the Lao Tzu and has now courageously brought forth a reconstructed text upon which the present translation is based. Through his systematic interpretation, the reader can come to a closer apprehension of the Tao.

HSÜNTZE CHI CH'ENG
(A COMPLETE SET ON HSÜNTZE)

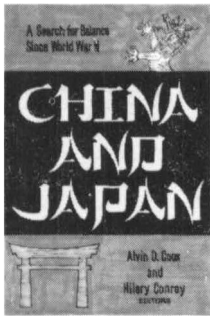

compiled by Prof. Yen Lin-feng

Known for his doctrine of men's natural wickedness, Hsün K'uang 荀況 lived in the latter half of the third century B.C. Being an orthodox follower of Confucius, he brought about a steadfast and consistent foundation and manifestation to the Confucian philosophy and he founded his doctrines on the analysis of human nature. Systematic and logical, he was recognized as a leader of the Confucian school in his own days.

This complete set on Hsüntze is divided under six subject headings. It is a standard reference work for the study of Hsüntze, the famous work by Hsün K'uang himself. Many of the titles here are reprints based on the valuable editions in various dynasties, the earliest being in the late Sung Dynasty. Authors include such noted figures as Kuei Yu-kuang 歸有光, Liang Chi-ch'ao 梁啟超, Yeh Shao-chün 葉紹鈞, Wang Hsien-ch'ien 王先謙, et al.

CHINA AND JAPAN

Search for Balance Since World War I

Alvin D. Coox and Hilary Conroy, Editors

"These essays touch on many aspects of the relationship between China and Japan in the twentieth century. Some present archival materials on diplomatic history, others take up individual careers, and still others present new information on the China War and its consequences. The set concludes with a shrewd analysis of the probable course of the relationship in the years immediately ahead.

"No theme has been more important for modern East Asian history, and these authors provide useful and important perspectives on the past and present. . . ."

FUNDAMENTALS OF POLITICAL ECONOMY

Edited with an introduction by George C. Wang

"Especially interesting is the treatment of problems of socialism in China, such as the presence of status differences at the workplace, the need for birth control as part of overall socialist planning, and the complex and sensitive issue of income distribution. . . . Throughout, the work is informed by the theoretical insights of Mao, particularly in its emphasis on the human and ideological role in socioeconomic change. . . . As a new generation of leadership emerges and the pace of economic development quickens, this book will serve as a benchmark for assessing China's evolving links with its Marxist-Leninist-Maoist heritage."—Carl Riskin, Columbia University

The Bureaucracy in India
An Historical Analysis of Development up to 1947

B. B. MISRA. The Bureaucracy in India is an analysis of the Indian Civil Service and the executive branch of the supporting services, particularly the provincial Civil Service. The author begins with a survey of Western theories on the nature and purpose of bureaucracy, then goes on to describe the Indian situation up to 1858, the rationalization and the bureaucracy from 1858 to 1919, and the structural changes that occurred between 1919 and 1947. Throughout the work, developments within the bureaucracy are related to the country's changing social and political conditions.

From Bondage to Liberation
East Asia 1860-1952

NIGEL CAMERON. Perhaps at no time in the history of East-West relations was the conflict more dramatic than during the century that began in 1860. In both China and Japan, major changes took place as a direct result of Western intervention. From Bondage to Liberation reviews in fine detail the events of those crucial years, discusses the policies of the governments and their servants, and presents brief portraits of those most intimately concerned. This informative and highly readable text is supplemented by numerous illustrations, maps, lists of romanized Chinese names and terms, and a glossary of all the Japanese terms used.

CONFUCIANISM & CHRISTIANITY

A Comparative Study

by Julia Ching

At last, there is a scholarly yet approachable study of Confucianism which successfully tackles the problem of making this intrinsically Oriental philosophy understandable to Westerners. The book's systematic treatment begins by exploring the historical encounter between Christianity and Confucianism, followed by a critical look at the Confucian heritage today. Topics discussed include: transcendence, prayer, meditation, mystique, cult, and the practice of self-transcendence in the political context. The author is an associate professor at Yale University and an associate member of the Institute of Oriental Religions, Sophia University (Tokyo). 234 pages $12.50

volume 1

As one of its principal activities, the Center for Korean Studies of the University of Hawaii has begun the publication of collections of scholarly studies on Korea. Outside of Korea, there are extremely few scholarly journals or monograph series devoted exclusively to Korea and encompassing all academic disciplines. Starting with the publication of Korean Studies, the Center hopes to make a significant contribution to filling this void. Volume 1 contains the following articles:

- Chin W. Kim, "Rule Ordering in Korean Phonology."
Young I. Lew, "The Reform Efforts and Ideas of Pak Yöng-hyo, 1894-1895."
Marshall R. Pihl, "Engineers of the Human Soul: North Korean Literature Today."
Byong Won Lee, "Structural Formulae of Melodies in the Two Sacred Buddhist Chant Styles of Korea."
Gerard F. Kennedy, "The Korean Kye: Maintaining Human Scale in a Modernizing Form."
Forrest R. Pitts, "Daily Movement Patterns and Communication in Rural Korea."
Young-Key Kim-Renaud, "Syllable Boundary Phenomena in Korean."
