

Janet Buttolph Johnson, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Delaware.

Philip Norton, professor of government, University of Hull, England.

Robert H. Webking, associate professor, department of political science, University of Texas at El Paso.

John Kenneth White, associate professor, department of political science, SUNY at Potsdam.

Retirements

C. J. "Ted" Hein retired in June 1986 from the L. P. Cookingham Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. He has been appointed Professor Emeritus of Public Administration.

John A. Hovel has retired from the department of political science, University of Texas at El Paso.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

Edward Fuchs, visiting at University of Texas at El Paso; formerly at Webster University.

David Kenney is visiting professor at Southern Illinois University for 1987. He was on the faculty of the University's department of political science from 1951 to 1977, and was a member of the Governor's cabinet in Illinois, 1977-1985.

David Lanoue, visiting at University of Texas at El Paso; formerly at SUNY, Stony Brook.

Thomas L. Pangle, University of Toronto, will be a visiting professor at the Ecole des hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales, Paris during May 1987. He will offer a series of seminars in French on the political theory of the American Founders.

Thomas O. Schlesinger, Plymouth State College, will be teaching a foreign policy seminar as a visiting lecturer in political science at the University of Innsbruck, Austria during the 1987 spring semester.

Award Recipients

National Endowment for the Humanities

The following political scientists are among 230 recipients of fellowships from NEH. Their names are followed by their institutional affiliations and their topics of study.

Jeffrey B. Abramson, Brandeis University. The Jury in America, A Constitutional and Philosophical Inquiry.

Leslie Goldstein, University of Delaware. Judicial Review and Contemporary American Liberal Democracy.

Fred I. Greenstein, Princeton University. Leadership in the Modern American Presidency.

Ralph C. Hancock, University of Idaho. Roots of the American Political Order in Calvinism and the Enlightenment.

Melvin Richter, City University of New York Graduate School and Hunter College. A Critical Introduction to Begriffsgeschichte (The History of Concepts).

Catherine H. Zuckert, Carleton College. Contemporary Reinterpretations of the Origins of the Western Philosophic Tradition in Plato. □

1987 Pi Sigma Alpha Award

Richard M. Scammon, Director of the Elections Research Center and highly regarded expert on elections and American politics, received the National Capital Area Political Science Association 1987 Pi Sigma Alpha Award. The award, recognizing outstanding contributions to both political science and public service, was made at the spring conference of the association on March 7, 1987. □

Fellows of the National Endowment for the Humanities

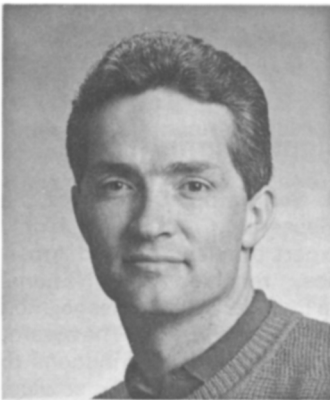

Jeffrey B. Abramson

Leslie Goldstein

Fred I. Greenstein

Ralph C. Hancock

Melvin Richter

Social Science Research Council

The following political scientists received fellowships and grants from the Social Science Research Council in 1986. These names are in addition to the recipients published in the fall 1986 PS.

Mark A. Boyer, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Maryland, for (1) training in microeconomic theory, public finance and defense economics, and (2) research on the budgetary and cost-sharing implications of a switch by NATO to a more defensive military posture.

Mario E. Carranza, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Chicago, for (1) the study of technical and political aspects of nuclear nonproliferation, and (2) an analysis of similarities and differences between the Brazilian and Argentine nuclear development programs, focusing on the effects of economic austerity measures by the International Monetary Fund and the transition from military to civilian rule in Argentina.

Gary Arthur Hawes, professor of political science, University of Michigan, for research on the social structure and politics of coconut production in the Philippines.

Gregg O. Kvistad, assistant professor of political science, University of Denver, for research on the political reliability of the German civil service.

Peter G. O'Brien, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Wisconsin, for research on contemporary political conflict among Turks and Germans in Berlin.

Steven Rood, associate professor of political science, University of the Philippines at Baguio, for research on transitional politics in the Philippines.

Konrad Stenzel, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for research in the Dominican Republic and Chile on political responses to external debt and the necessity for adjustment.

Thuan V. Truong, McLean, Virginia, for research on the politicization of the Vietnamese Confederation of Workers in the early 1970s. □

Tinker Foundation

Following are political scientists receiving grants or visiting professorships from the Tinker Foundation. The Foundation, located at 55 East 59th Street, New York, NY 10022, promotes the interchange and exchange of information within the community of those interested in Latin American and Iberian Affairs.

Visiting Professorship

Maria do Carmo Carvalho Campbello de Souza, associate professor of political science, University of Sao Paulo. She will be in residence at Columbia University's department of political science for the spring semester 1987. Her areas of expertise include Latin American history, Brazilian political institutions and the political party systems in Latin America.

Field Research Grants, 1986-87

The following information contains the awardee's name, current institution, project title, and country destination.

Felipe Aguero, Duke University. Civilian Policies on National Defense and the Military During Spain's Transition from Authoritarian to Democratic Rule (1975-1985): Spain.

Silvia Borzutzky, University of Pittsburgh. Redemocratization and Political Representation in Argentina and Brazil: Argentina, Brazil.

María H. Castro, Duke University. After Censorship: Media and Redemocratization in Uruguay and Brazil: Uruguay.

Elizabeth B. Harlowe, University of Pittsburgh. The Coffee Marketing Process in Honduras: Who Benefits?: Honduras.

F. E. Lehoucq, Duke University. The Origins of Authoritarianism and Democracy: A Comparative Study of Costa Rica, El Salvador and Guatemala: Guatemala, El Salvador, Costa Rica.

Juan J. Lopez, University of Chicago.

Department Chairs

Will your faculty members be included in this decade's Biographical Directory of political scientists? Please make sure all your colleagues in political science are listed in the directory.

Questionnaires have been mailed to all APSA members. If you need additional copies, call the national office, (202) 483-2512. The deadline for completed questionnaires has been extended to July 15, 1987.

Consolidation of Democracy in Contemporary Argentina: Argentina.

Mark Peceny, Stanford University. Revolution in Central America: Costa Rica.

David Pion-Berlin, Ohio State University. The Breakdown of the Argentine Military Regime: Argentina.

Gary Shroyer, University of Pittsburgh. Honduran General History Project: Honduras.

Kimberly Ann Stanton, Stanford University.

Capitalism and Democracy: Institutional Conditions for Consent in Chile: Chile. □

United States Institute of Peace

Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace

A political scientist is among the initial group of eight Jennings Randolph Fellows selected by the U.S. Institute of Peace.

Paul Seabury, professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author or editor of nearly a dozen books, including The Rise and Decline of the Cold War and The Foreign Policy of the United States. As a Jennings Randolph Fellow, he will be full-time, in-residence at the U.S. Institute of Peace for the 1987-88 school year beginning in August 1987. His project will be a book manuscript, Proxies in Low Intensity Warfare.

Grants Program

Political scientists have received two of the fifteen grants announced in recent months by the Institute.

Bruce Russett, professor, Yale University: A one-year partial-support grant of $7,700 for support of Dr. Russett's preparing several separately publishable chapters of a book on the relationship of economic conditions and the state of public opinion in democratic countries and the aggressive use of force internationally.

Abdul Aziz Said, professor, school of international service, The American University: A one-year grant of $34,380 to permit the university to add a multi-course Peace and Conflict Resolution concentration to the Washington Semester undergraduate study and internship program and to provide for the development of a curriculum and peace information library in support of that concentration. □

Weston H. Agor has received the George Washington Honor Medal from the Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge.

Other Awards and Honors

Weston H. Agor, department of political science, The University of Texas at El Paso, has received a national award for research and teaching on the subject of intuitive management from the Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge. The jury awarded him the George Washington Honor Medal for excellence in the category of economic education.

Michael Brecher, professor of political science, McGill University, has received the recently established H. Noel Fieldhouse Award for Distinguished Teaching from McGill in 1986.

Aaron Freedberg, Harvard University, has received the British Politics Group's Samuel Beer Dissertation Prize for "Change, Assessment and Adaptation: Britain and the Experience of Relative Decline, 1895-1905.

David S. Mason, associate professor of political science at Butler University, was the recipient of the Quincy Wright Award for his book, Public Opinion and Political Change in Poland, 1980-82 (Cambridge University Press, 1985). This award is presented each year by the International Studies Association/Midwest for the best monograph in international studies published by a scholar in the Midwest.

James Wunsch was awarded the Robert F. Kennedy Award for Superior Teaching by the Student Board of Governors of Creighton University in spring 1985. □

In Memoriam

Walter H. Bennett

Walter Hartwell Bennett, Professor Emeritus of Political Science at the University of Alabama, died on November 20, 1986, in Danville, Virginia, at the age of 79.

A member of the Alabama faculty from 1938 until his retirement in 1977, Professor Bennett received his A.B. degree at the University of Richmond. He earned both the A.M. and Ph.D. degrees at Duke University.

Long active in the affairs of the discipline, Professor Bennett was a former vice president and president of the Southern Political Science Association. He also served on the Council of the American Political Science Association (1952-54) and as news and notes editor of the American Political Science Review (1950-52).

A courtly southern gentleman, Professor Bennett is remembered by his colleagues as both a distinguished scholar and an outstanding teacher of political theory. He authored numerous articles on such subjects as popular government, constitutionalism, and federalism. His major work, American Theories of Federalism, was published in 1964. He is survived by two children and his widow, Maxine Purcell Bennett, a former professor of political science at Stillman College in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

Joseph C. Pilegge
The University of Alabama

Howard Bucknell III

Howard Bucknell III died on Tuesday, October 7, 1986. A memorial service was held at North Chapel, San Diego Naval Training Base on October 10 and his ashes were scattered at sea. As one of his former teachers, it is difficult to convey the distress which I and my colleagues feel at the loss of both a friend and an outstanding alumnus.

Howard was born in Canton, China, where his father was a Foreign Service Officer. He had a distinguished career in the U.S. Navy. He was commissioned as an Ensign in 1944. He was in the first group, along with President Jimmy Carter, which was selected by Admiral