

People in Political Science

Activities

Thomas J. Anton has been appointed A. Alfred Taubman Professor of American Institutions in the political science department of Brown University. He will be chairing a new undergraduate concentration in public policy studies. Anton previously was professor of political science at the University of Michigan.

Arnold Belchman, visiting scholar at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace for 1982-83, has been re-appointed for a second year, 1983-84. With Dr. Mikhail Bernstam, he has co-authored a biography of Yuri Andropov to be published (Stein & Day) in June.

J. Edwin Benton, University of South Florida, has been awarded a $2500 grant from the University Faculty Research and Creative Scholarship Fund to study the impact of Reagan "New Federalism" on state and local governments during the summer, 1983.

Adda B. Bozeman participated in a National Episcopal Church conference, To Make Peace, at the Cathedral of St. John in the Wilderness, Denver, Colorado in April. An essay commissioned by the U.S. Information Agency, "U.S. Foreign Policy and the Prospects for Democracy, National Security and World Peace," was presented at the Consultative Assembly on New Directions in U.S. Foreign Policy in February at Georgetown University.

Fran Burke, Suffolk University, School of Management, has been elected to the National Council of the American Society for Public Administration.

Joseph H. Carens, Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton, has been invited to be a member of the Institute for Advanced Studies next year.

Robert DiClerico has returned to West

Virginia University after serving as a visiting professor at the University of Houston. He will resume his position as Director of Undergraduate Studies and assume the new position of Associate Chairman, Department of Political Science.

Peter Grothe, who has taken a year's leave of absence from The Monterey Institute of International Studies in order to lecture in Europe and Asia for the U.S. Information Agency, has been elected President of the Northern California Political Science Association. The association includes 90 universities and colleges in Northern and Central California and Nevada.

Arie Halachmi was elected to be the president of the Nashville Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration.

Milda K. Hedblom, Augsburg College, has been awarded a grant from the Canadian government for the study of Canadian mass media and politics during 1983 in Canada.

Hong N. Kim, professor of political science, has returned to West Virginia University after a seven-month research trip to Japan and Korea under the Fulbright-Hays Faculty Research Abroad Program.

David C. Lege, director of the Center for the Study of Man in Contemporary Society and professor of government and international studies at the University of Notre Dame, directed the University's London Program during the spring semester 1983. Upon his return, he undertook direction of a comprehensive two-year study of American Catholic parish life since Vatican II. The study focuses on organizational relationships within parishes, as well as on the religious, social, and political values of American Catholic laity and religions. It is funded initially by a $348,000 grant from the Lilly Endowment.

Herbert Maza will be Assistant to the President at the American College of Greece next year. He will continue to be Secretary General of the Association of International Colleges and Universities and European Secretary of the International Association of University Presidents. He recently retired as the President of the Institute for American Universities in Aix-en-Provence, France.

Michael McDonald has been named to the editorial board of Experimental Studies of Politics.

George Moyser, University of Manchester, England, has recently received, with a colleague, two British SSRC grants totalling £250,000 to conduct a national and local community study of political participation in Britain. He will be on partial leave of absence to direct the project from 1983-86.

Virginia Cohn Parkum has been appointed associate editor for the Journal of Voluntary Action Research.

Ellen Frankel Paul, associate professor of political science at Bowling Green State University and research director of its Social Philosophy and Policy Center, appointed as U.S. Representative to the United Nations Committee on Social Development.

The Commission meets in Vienna, Austria, and reports directly to the Economic and Social Council, one of the organizational bodies of the United Nations. In recent years the Commission has treated such policy issues as: the rights of the family, children, the aged, and disabled; the efficacy of promoting worker cooperatives; the conditions of migrant workers around the world; the equitable distribution of national income; prospective trends in socio-economic development; and crime prevention.

Sophia Peterson, professor of political science, has returned to West Virginia University after a sabbatical leave in London, England in which she was continuing her research on sex discrimination in the U.S. and Britain.

Fred Rosen of the London School of Economics and Political Science has been appointed the first full-time general editor of The Collected Works of Jeremy Bentham for a three-year term from October 1983 to succeed J. R. Dinwiddy. Besides publishing the definitive edition of Bentham's works, it is hoped that the Bentham Project will develop more as a research center for scholars interested in Bentham and related topics. In 1983, the Constitutional Code (Vol. 1), Chrestomathia, and Deontology will be published. For further information and subscriptions to the Bentham Newsletter, contact The Bentham Project, History Department, University College London, Gower Street, London W.C.1. England.

John Schmidhauser has returned to the University of Southern California after serving as the Visiting Charles Talbot Professor at the University of Virginia, 1982-83.

Steven A. Shull has been named to the editorial board of Presidential Studies Quarterly as well as being elected to the Executive Council of the Southwestern Political Science Association.

J. David Singer, professor of political science at the University of Michigan, will spend 1983-84 on sabbatical at the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva. He received an honorary LLD from Northwestern University in June 1983.

Terry O. Sullivan, Government Department, University of Texas at Austin, will be one of three judges for the third D. B. Hardeman Prize sponsored by the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library to encourage scholarly research on the U.S. Congress.

Evert Vedung, presently at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, University of Texas, Austin, has been appointed visiting scholar at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, University of California, Berkeley, from June 1 to August 1, 1983. Vedung is working with Lee Schipper and others on a comparative study of energy conservation in the U.S., Sweden and Denmark. He will contribute a chapter on differences in policy style between the U.S. and Sweden that may explain different emphases upon conservation in the two countries.

Alan S. Zuckerman, Brown University, presented the Crown-Minnow Lecture at the University of Notre Dame, "The Limits of Political Behavior: Individual Calculation and Survival During the Holocaust."

The Department of Political Science and Department of Urban Studies at the University of Alabama in Birmingham will merge effective September 1, 1983. The new department will be called the Department of Political Science and Urban Affairs. The merged department will have a faculty of nine and will award four degrees—bachelors degrees in political science and in urban affairs, and masters degrees in public administration and in urban affairs.

Administrative Appointments

William G. Andrews has been appointed director of the SUNY Brockport Social Sciences program in Paris, France for 1983-84.

Lawrence Ward Beer appointed the Fred Morgan Kirby Professor of Civil Rights and head of the Department of Government and Law at Lafayette College, formerly of the University of Colorado, Boulder. Beer served as Ohira Visiting Professor of Japanese Studies at the University of British Columbia in March, 1983.

David C. Colby, dean of freshmen and assistant dean of the College, Williams College.

David N. Farnsworth, professor of political science at Wichita State University, has been named acting dean of the university's Fairmount College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Peter R. Gluck, professor of political science and department chair at the University of Michigan-Flint, to acting provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Allan S. Hammock, chairman, Department of Political Science, West Virginia University.

F. Ted Hebert, associate director of the Bureau of Government Research, University of Oklahoma.

Donald C. Menzel, professor of political science, West Virginia University, will continue as Director of Graduate Studies for the fall semester 1983-84.

David Neubauer was reappointed chairman, University of New Orleans.

Lela Garner Noble, professor of political science, San Jose State University, appointed Associate/Academic Vice-President/Faculty Affairs.

J. Martin Rochester, chairperson, University of Missouri-St. Louis.

David Sink, acting chairperson, Department of Political Science and Urban Affairs, University of Alabama in Birmingham.

Robert J. Spitzer, assistant professor of political science, SUNY at Cortland, has been named department chair.

V. Stanley Vardys, chairman, Department of Political Science, University of Oklahoma.

Alfred M. Zuck, assistant secretary for administration and management at the U.S. Department of Labor, has been named executive director of the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration.

New Appointments

Tsuneo Akaha, assistant professor of political science, Bowling Green State University; formerly of Kansas State University.

William S. Corlett, Jr., assistant professor, Bates College.

Martha Derthick will be joining the Woodrow Wilson Department of Government and Foreign Affairs, University of Virginia, as the first Julia Allen Cooper Chair Professor. Derthick, formerly of the Brookings Institution, will also be a member of the Center for Advanced Studies for three years.

Robert Duval, assistant professor of political science, West Virginia University; formerly of Florida State University and the Department of Environmental Regulation, State of Florida.

Elizabeth Ferris, assistant professor,

People in Political Science

Department of Government and Law, Lafayette College, Easton, Pennsylvania.

Mark Kessler, instructor, Bates College.

George Klosko, assistant professor, University of Virginia.

Kenneth Lieberthal, professor of political science and research associate of the Center of Chinese Studies, University of Michigan; formerly professor of political science at Swarthmore College.

Scott Moore, assistant professor, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Paul E. Peterson, Director of Governmental Studies, the Brookings Institution, formerly a professor of political science and education at the University of Chicago. Peterson won the 1981 APSA Woodrow Wilson prize for the best book on government, politics or international affairs.

James F. Pontuso, assistant professor, University of Virginia.

Mostafa Rejal, Miami University (Ohio), has been named the university's first Distinguished Professor.

David B. Robertson, assistant professor, University of Missouri-St. Louis; formerly of the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Denis Fred Simon, assistant professor of international management, Sloan School of Management, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; formerly with the U.S. government.

Barry P. Warren, assistant professor, Colgate University.

Kenneth Whitby, assistant professor, University of South Carolina; formerly of the University of Iowa.

Promotions

Ellen Boneparth, professor, San Jose State University.

J. Vincent Buck, professor, California State University, Fullerton.

Bert Buzan, professor, California State University, Fullerton.

Carol A. Cassel, associate professor, The University of Alabama.

Sung-II Choi, professor, Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

Patrick R. Cotter, associate professor, The University of Alabama.

Joseph Di Gangi, professor, Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

Charles D. Elder, professor, Wayne State University.

Charles E. Ellison, associate professor, School of Planning, University of Cincinnati.

Roy B. Flemming, associate professor, with continuing tenure, Wayne State University.

Linda L. Fowler, associate professor, Syracuse University.

Larry N. Gerston, professor, San Jose State University.

Paul L. Hain, professor, The University of New Mexico.

Arle Halachmi, professor, Department of Government and Public Affairs, Tennessee State University.

Diddy R. M. Hitchins, professor, University of Alaska, Anchorage.

Stefan J. Kapsch, professor, Reed College.

Carol W. Kohfeld, associate professor, University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Peter Lupsha, professor, University of New Mexico.

Donald J. Maletz, associate professor, with tenure, The University of Oklahoma.

Michael McDonald, associate professor, with tenure, University of New Orleans.

C. Kenneth Meyer, granted tenure, The University of Oklahoma.

David M. O'Brien, associate professor with tenure, University of Virginia.

Thomas L. Pangle, professor, University of Toronto.

Larry Sabato, associate professor, with tenure, University of Virginia.

Steven A. Shull, professor, University of New Orleans.

G. Alan Tarr, associate professor, Rutgers University (Camden).

Edward Welsban, Distinguished Teaching Professor, Department of Political Science, SUNY at Binghamton.

Robert Wirsing, professor, University of South Carolina.

Alan S. Zuckerman, professor, Brown University.

Retirements

Orrin B. Conaway, Jr., Benedum Professor of American Government and Administration and chairman of the Department of Political Science, West Virginia University.

Lewis Feuer, professor emeritus, University of Virginia.

Grady Nunn, chairperson, department of political science, University of Alabama in Birmingham.

Robert F. Sasseen, professor, San Jose State University.

Robert Stoudemire, Distinguished Professor Emeritus, University of South Carolina.

Fr. Paul A. Woelfl, S.J., founder of the Political Science Department at John Carroll University and its chairman from 1962-77.

Visiting and Temporary Assignments

William G. Borges, San Jose State University, 1983-84.

Mary Anne Cavicchi, visiting assistant professor, John Carroll University.

Peter Haas, visiting instructor, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Patrick Hagan, visiting assistant professor, West Virginia University; currently completing doctoral studies at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Gerald L. Houseman, visiting professor, California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, 1983-84.

Janice Love has been re-appointed visiting assistant professor, University of South Carolina.

Benjamin Marquez, San Jose State University, 1983-84.

William Miller, senior lecturer, Strathclyde University, and director of the 1979 Scottish Election Survey will be a visiting professor at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Thomas E. Patterson of Syracuse University, to be visiting professor at the University of Mainz, West Germany, spring-summer 1983.

Robert Pearigen, visiting instructor, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Paul Peretz, Culpeper Post-Doctoral Fellow, Brown University, for the academic year 1983-84; currently at the University of Washington.

Sue Rinehart, visiting assistant professor, University of South Carolina; formerly of Rutgers University.

Carlos G. Rizowy, visiting assistant professor, Roosevelt University, 1982-83.

George K. Romoser, professor of political science, University of New Hampshire, held the Chair of Political Science, University of Mannheim, West Germany, April 1982-September 1983.

Lyman T. Sargent, professor, will be teaching at the University of Exeter, UK, for the 1983-84 academic year as part of a faculty exchange. Iain Hampsher-Monk from the University of Exeter will be teaching at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Chaitram Singh, re-appointed visiting assistant professor, University of South Carolina.

Terry Whitsitt, visiting assistant professor, West Virginia University; on leave from the U.S. Department of Labor.

Gary Zuk, visiting assistant professor, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Awards

National Academy of Sciences

The National Academy of Sciences has announced the election of new members in recognition of their distinguished and continuing achievements in original research. Election to membership in the Academy is considered to be one of the highest honors that can be accorded an American scientist or engineer. Those newly elected bring the total to 1,415.

The National Academy of Sciences is a private organization of scientists and engineers dedicated to the furtherance of science and its use for the general welfare. The Academy was established in 1863 by a Congressional Act of Incorporation, signed by Abraham Lincoln, that calls upon the Academy to act as an official adviser to the federal government, upon request, in any matter of science or technology. This provision accounts for the close ties that have always existed between the Academy and the government, although the Academy is not a government agency.

Two political scientists were elected at the April meeting of the Academy. They are: Richard F. Fenno, Jr., Don Alonzo Watson Professor of Political Science, University of Rochester, and Sidney Verba, professor of government, Harvard University.

Other political scientists who are members of the National Academy of Sciences are: Gabriel A. Almond, Phillip E. Converse, Robert Dahl, Karl W. Deutsch, Seymour Martin Lipset, James March, William H. Riker, and Herbert Simon.

American Academy of Arts and Sciences

The following political scientists have been elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences:

Henry Hugh Heclo, professor of government, Harvard University.

Robert Owen Keohane, professor of politics, Brandeis University.

Douglas Whiting Rae, professor of political science, Yale University.

James Lloyd Sundquist, senior fellow, Governmental Studies, The Brookings Institution.

Raymond Edwin Wolfinger, professor of political science, University of California, Berkeley.

German Marshall Fund Fellows

The German Marshall Fund of the United States has announced awards of up to $28,000, plus travel expenses, to each of 13 scholars. The program supports full-time research into "significant contemporary economic, political, and social developments involving the United States and Europe." Following is a list of the recipients in political science, their institutional affiliations, and their topics of study.

William Branson, school of public and international affairs, Princeton University; the structure of trade in the U.S. and Europe, and its implications for economic performance and for American and European foreign economic policy.

Peter Gourevitch, department of political science, University of California at San Diego: the response of the U.S., France, Germany, the United Kingdom, and Sweden to three periods of economic crisis.

Arend Lijphart, department of political science, University of California at San Diego: analysis of the electoral systems of 24 countries and the relationships between election rules and the characteristics of parties and party systems.

Charles Lipson, department of political science, University of Chicago: various proposals for institutional reform of the international debt regime.

Marc Plattner, U.S. Mission to the United Nations: Income Redistribution and Economic Justice.

Guggenheim Fellowships

The John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation has awarded fellowships totaling $5,540,000 to 292 scholars, scientists, and artists in its fifty-ninth annual competition. The fellows were chosen from among 3,571 applicants "on the basis of demonstrated accomplishment in the past and strong promise for the future."

Following are the names of the winners in the field of political science and their proposed studies:

Murray J. Edelman, professor of political science, University of Wisconsin at Madison: The construction of political issues.

Richard E. Flathman, professor of political science, Johns Hopkins University: The concept of political freedom.

Zvi Gitelman, professor of political science and director of the Center for Russian and East European Studies, University of Michigan: Citizen strategies in the Soviet administrative system.

Arend Lijphart, professor of political science, University of California at San Diego: A comparative analysis of election rules.

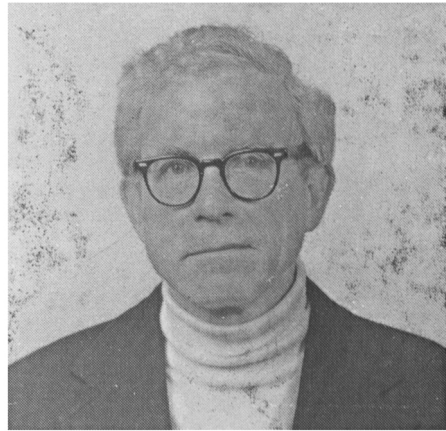

Kenneth Prewitt, president, Social Science Research Council (New York): The governing of science in a democracy.

Kenneth A. Shepsle, professor of political science, Washington University (St. Louis): Institutional equilibrium.

National Humanities Center Fellows

Two political scientists have been selected as National Humanities Center Fellows for 1983-84:

Robert Lane, Yale University: Markets and Politics: The Human Product (spring only).

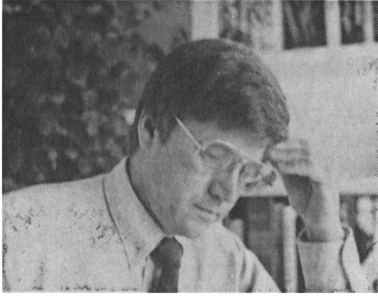

Robert Lane of Yale University will spend spring term at the National Humanities Center as a fellow.

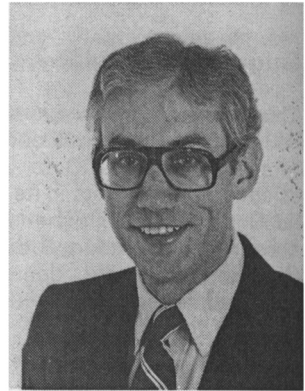

Marc Plattner of the U.S. Mission to the United Nations will write about income redistribution and economic justice during his year as a fellow at the National Humanities Center.

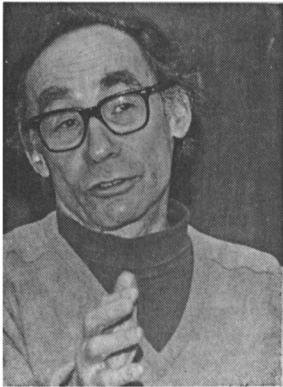

People in Political Science

Kenneth Prewitt
Social Science Research Council

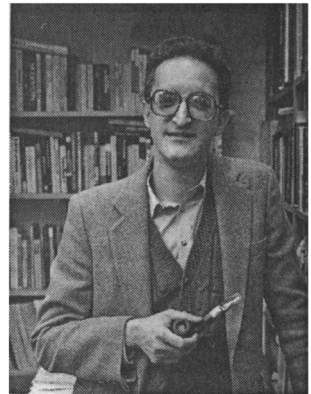

Arend Lijphart
University of California-San Diego

Murray Edelman
University of Wisconsin-Madison

Guggenheim Fellows

Kenneth Shepsle
Washington University-
St. Louis

Zvi Gitelman
University of Michigan

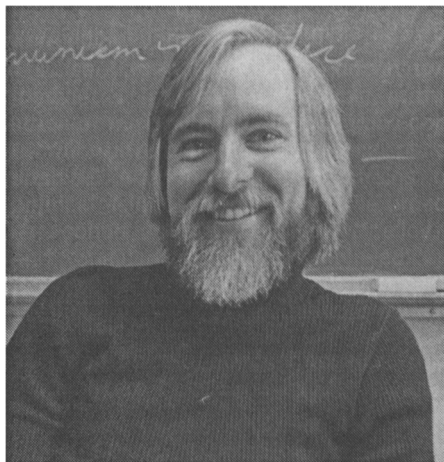

Richard Flathman
Johns Hopkins University

Charlotte W. Newcombe Doctoral Dissertation Fellowships

Two political scientists to receive Charlotte W. Newcombe Fellowships are:

Nicolai N. Petro, Department of Government and Foreign Affairs, University of Virginia: The Limits of Idealism: The Human Rights Policy and U.S.-Soviet Relations.

William B. Smith, Department of Political Science, Stanford University: British Government in Northern Ireland: A Study in Conflict Management.

Joseph Carens will study ethics and organizations as a Rockefeller Foundation Fellow.

Rockefeller Foundation Humanities Fellowships Awards

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced the winners of its annual fellowships in the humanities. The fellows will receive awards of $15,000 to $25,000 each to support their studies. The following political scientists have been awarded Rockefeller Foundation awards:

Joseph H. Carens, assistant professor of politics and public affairs, Princeton University: Ethics and organizations.

Joan E. Cocks, assistant professor of politics, Mount Holyoke College: The oppositional imagination—critical reflections on radical feminism.

Other Honors and Awards

Barry Bozeman, Maxwell School, Syracuse University, received the Edwin O. Stene Award for the best article published in the 1981 issues of the American Review of Public Administration. His article, "Organization Design in the Public Bureaucracy," was published in the Summer 1981 issue.

Barbara J. Burt, University of California, Riverside, is the first winner of the Alice Paul Award sponsored by the Women's Caucus for Political Science. This award is given to a female graduate student with the best dissertation prospectus in political science or public administration.

Joan Cocks of Mount Holyoke College has been awarded a Rockefeller Fellowship to examine radical feminism.

Her study is titled "Locally Adopted Energy Policy: A Political Analysis."

Charles Elder, Wayne State University, received one of the President's Awards for Excellence in Teaching.

Roy Flemming, Wayne State University, received one of the Board of Governor's Awards for Distinguished Scholarly Achievement in 1982-83.

Paul L. Hain was one of four faculty to be awarded the University of New Mexico 1982-83 Outstanding Teacher Award.

James W. Muller, University of Alaska, has been awarded a White House Fellowship for 1983-84.

Henry J. Pratt, Wayne State University, has been awarded a Senior Faculty Enrichment Grant in Canadian Studies, 1983-84.

Larry Sabato, University of Virginia, has been awarded a Kellogg Foundation Fellowship.

Elizabeth M. Sanders, Rice University, has been appointed to the Wilson Center for next year.

Jeffrey Tulis, Princeton University, has been awarded a Fellowship by the American Council of Learned Societies for research in the humanities. His project is: The Rhetoric Presidency.

Dale Vinyard, Wayne State University, has been awarded a Faculty Enrichment Study Grant, Canadian Studies, 1983.

In Memoriam

Norman Padelford

Norman Padelford died on July 13, 1982, in Claremont, California. He suffered a stroke in January and seemed to have been making good progress until he had a series of ministrokes that took him rapidly downhill. Norman was 78 years old.

Norman Padelford was the first tenured political scientist at M.I.T. and he was a founding father of political science at the Institute. Starting in 1944 he built up the political science section in what was then the Department of Economics and Social Science. His interests were international relations and his introductory course had enrollments of 150 to 190 students every term and was always taught in sections of 15-20 students. He was the author with "Abe" Lincoln of West Point of a highly successful textbook in international relations.

Norman did his undergraduate work at Dennison University in Ohio, a school he was deeply loyal to, serving for many years as one of its trustees and from which he received an honorary degree in 1947. He obtained his Ph.D. from Harvard and began teaching at Colgate, where he became both a professor and the chairman of the department before going to the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy in 1936. When Dean Halford Hoskins made his dramatic break with Tufts and took much of that faculty with him to Washington to set up the School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), Norman came to M.I.T. He continued, however, to teach one course at Fletcher and he regularly recruited Fletcher students as his teaching assistants.

During World War II Norman worked for the State Department. He was a member of the American Delegation to the Dumbarton Oaks Conference and he also attended the San Francisco Conference that organized the United Nations. He served as the secretary of the Commission of Jurors who revised the statutes of the International Court of Justice and The Hague. He accompanied Secretary of State James Byrnes to the London Foreign Ministers' Conference in 1945. Norman was a highly regarded authority in international law; he specialized in the problems of water ways, river systems, and canals. His first book was on the politics of the United States at the European Inland Transportation Conference at London in 1945. In addition to the Balkans book and the textbook, Norman wrote: International Law and Diplomacy of the Spanish Civil War; The Panama Canal in War and Peace; The Politics of U.N. Elections; The Dynamics of International Politics; Africa and World Order; and with Leland Goodrich of Columbia, The United Nations in the Balance. He served many