

Theodore R. Marmor has been named the first American Fellow of the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research.

politics at Peking University during the 1987 fall semester. While in Beijing, he will teach courses on American national political institutions, macro-politics, and democratic political theory.

Jewel Prestage, Dean, School of Public Policy & Urban Affairs, and professor, department of political science, Southern University, is visiting professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

Lucille S. Rich, visiting assistant professor of political science, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, for academic year 1987-88.

Gregory Russell, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, and research associate, Eric Voegelin Institute for American Renaissance Studies, Louisiana State University.

Nancy Spalding, visiting assistant professor of political science, East Carolina University, for 1987-88.

Award Recipients

American Council of Learned Societies

The following political scientists have received awards from the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS). Those who received awards jointly administered by the ACLS and the Social Science Research Council are listed in this section under "Social Science Research Council."

Postdoctoral Fellowship for Senior Scholars

David C. Johnston, assistant professor of political science, Columbia University, for "The Idea of Community."

Postdoctoral Fellowships for Recent Ph.D. Recipients

Jerry G. Watts, assistant professor of political science, Wesleyan University, for "The Political Sociology of Black Intellectuals."

Nicholas Xenos, assistant professor of political science, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, for "Out of Paradise: Scarcity and Modernity."

Grants in Aid for Postdoctoral Research

Jeanne Nienaber Clarke, associate professor of political science, University of Arizona, for "Nature's Warrior: Harold Ickes and the Department of the Interior."

Canadian Institute for Advanced Research

Theodore R. Marmor, professor of public management and of political science at the Yale School of Management, has been named a Fellow of the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research (CIAR). One of three fellows named to the Institute's new Program in Population Health, Marmor is the first American recipient of the fellowship.

CIAR Fellows are appointed for terms of varying length, up to a maximum of five years. During that time, Fellows receive salaries and benefits, including research expenses, commensurate with their stature and their time commitment to the Institute.

Edgar S. Furniss Book Award

Andrew F. Krepinovich, Jr. has been awarded the 1987 Edgar S. Furniss, Jr. National Security Book Award for The Army and Vietnam, published by The Johns Hopkins University Press in 1986. The award, which carries a $1,000 prize, is presented each year by the Mershon Center of The Ohio State University for the best new book on national security research by an author publishing his first book.

Further information on the Furniss Award competition can be obtained from Carole Dale, Mershon Center, 199 W. Tenth Avenue, The Ohio State University, Columbus, OH 43201.

German Marshall Fund Fellows

The German Marshall Fund of the United States Research Fellowship Program has given 12 scholars grants to support research on significant economic, political, and social developments involving the United States and Europe.

Following are the political scientist awardees with their affiliation and research topic.

Michael Barzelay, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University: The Autonomous Community of Andalusia, Spain's largest regional government, was created in 1982 from an economically and politically underdeveloped province lacking the separatist traditions typical of the other Spanish autonomies. Barzelay will analyze the strategies used in Andalusia to shape democratic politics and to create administrative capacities as a case study in the process of institution-building.

Nancy Bermeo, Department of Politics, Princeton University: Bermeo will examine how the experience of dictatorship affects the thinking of political elites involved in building democracy in a country. By comparing Italy, Spain and Peronist Argentina, she will analyze how this "political learning" affects the course of redemocratization.

Stanley Hoffmann, Department of Government, Harvard University: Hoffmann suggests that France's distinctive behavior in international affairs is rooted in the French national crisis of 1934-46—the fall of the Third Republic, the effects of the Vichy regime, and the postwar restoration of a free France—which shaped French attitudes toward foreign policy. This study will explore the policy implications of these attitudes for the U.S. and France.

Jonas Pontusson, Department of Government, Cornell University: This project will compare union response and management initiative in the introduction of computer-based production technologies. Pontusson will focus on how shop-floor politics affect the application of such technologies in the British, French, Swedish and German auto industries.

Hoover Fellowships

The following political scientists have received fellowships or grants in 1987 from the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library Association, Inc. For further information about fellowships see the "Research and Training Support" section in this issue of PS.

Michael Lewis-Beck, professor, and Peverill Squire, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Iowa, Iowa City, for "Herbert Hoover and the Theory of the State.

Steven M. Neuse, associate professor, department of political science, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, for "David E. Lilienthal: Vision and Reality in Pursuit of the Public Realm."

Jan Blaupain Award

Richard Saltman, associate professor of health policy and management at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, received the 1987 Jan Blaupain Award for his article, "Re-vitalising Public Health Care Systems: A Proposal for Public Competition in Sweden," published in Health Policy 7 (1987), 21-40.

People in Political Science

The European Healthcare Management Association gives the award for the outstanding publication within the last year on health services management development. An award, valued at $1,000, will be awarded in 1988. Final date for submissions is February 15, 1988. For further details, write: Philip Berman, 1 Carlton Villas, Shelbourne Road, Dublin 4, Ireland.

National Research Council

The National Research Council has awarded fellowships to 40 students in the second year of a Ford Foundation program to increase the representation of minorities on faculties of American colleges and universities.

The predoctoral fellowships include individual stipends and grants to the graduate institutions in lieu of tuition and fees and may extend up to three years; the dissertation awards provide one-year stipends.

Following are the political scientists:

Predoctoral Award

Cecilia A. Rodriguez, University of Dallas.

Dissertation Awards

John W. Cotman, Boston University.

Katharine Tate, University of Michigan.

National Science Foundation

Joyce P. Kaufman, department of political science, Whittier College, has won a $15,000 award from the National Science Foundation for instruction in computer-simulated negotiation in a cross-cultural context. The grant, made by the NSF College Science Instrumentation Program, may be used to purchase instructional equipment. The amount of the grant must be matched by the awardee's college or university.

Social Science Research Council

Following are the names, affiliations, and topics of political scientists who were awarded fellowships or grants by Council committees in recent competitions for research in the social sciences and humanities. The Social Science Research Council is located at 605 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10158.

International Doctoral Research Fellowships

Eastern Europe

Michael H. Bernhard, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Columbia University, for research on the rise of public politics in Poland: the history and significance of the democratic opposition, 1976-80.

Anne E. Henderson, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for research on the relations between the International Monetary Fund and Hungary, Romania, and Yugoslavia.

Jill A. Irvine, Ph.D. candidate in government, Harvard University, for research on state building and nationalism: the Communist party of Yugoslavia and the Croatian question, 1941-45.

The following graduate training fellowships were also awarded:

Lubov Fajfer, graduate student in political science, University of California, Los Angeles, for study to increase competence in areas of East European economic policy, Soviet economic policy, civil-military relations, policy toward the Warsaw Pact, and the general field of international political economy; preparatory work for a dissertation on "The Impact of Eastern Europe on Soviet Domestic and Bloc Policy."

Gary Lee Gelpel, graduate student in political science, Columbia University, for affiliation with the University of Arizona's working group on Soviet and East European high technology development.

Latin America and the Caribbean

Fabrice Lehoucq, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Duke University, for research in Costa Rica on the origins of democracy in Costa Rica.

William Nylen, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Columbia University, for research in Brazil on small business associations in Brazil and their integration into the political system.

Timothy Scully, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Berkeley, for research in Chile on political competition and regime stability.

Near and Middle East

Eva R. Bellin, Ph.D. candidate in politics, Princeton University, for research in Tunisia on the changing nature of state-society relations in Tunisia since independence.

Southeast Asia

Daniel Dhakidae, Ph.D. candidate in government, Cornell University, for research in Indonesia on the political economy of the Indonesian news industry.

Soviet Union

The following graduate training fellowships were awarded:

Joel Hellman, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Oxford, for training in preparation for a study of the nature of political change in the Soviet Union using the debate over peace as a case study.

William W. Jarosz, Ph.D. candidate in government, Harvard University, for training in preparation for a study of international relations theory and approaches to the study of Soviet foreign policy.

William Wood, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Indiana University, for training in preparation for a study of the history and culture of Central Asia, concentrating on the 19th century.

The following dissertation fellowship was also awarded:

James C. Moltz, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Berkeley, for a dissertation on U.S.-

Soviet space competition and future superpower relations.

Western Europe

Nigel J. Boyle, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Duke University, for research in the United Kingdom on labor market policies in Britain since 1979.

Lowell R. Turner, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Berkeley, for research in West Germany and the U.S. on industrial relations and the reorganization of work in the auto and telecommunication service industries.

Grants for Advanced International Research

Africa

Norma J. Kriger, assistant professor of political science, The Johns Hopkins University, for research in Zimbabwe on postwar rural politics.

China

Suzanne P. Ogden, associate professor of political science, Northeastern University, will participate in the Mellon Program for Summer Language Training at the Inter-University Program for Chinese Language Studies (Taipei).

Japan

Mike M. Mochizuki, assistant professor of political science, Yale University, for research on disengaging the Japanese state: the administrative reform campaign of the 1980s.

Near and Middle East

Iliya F. Harik, professor of political science, Indiana University, for research on privatization development strategies in Tunisia and Egypt and their effects on economic growth and equity.

Birol A. Yeshilada, assistant professor of political science, University of Missouri at Columbia, for research on a macroeconomic and behavioral study of Turkey's economic integration efforts with the European Economic Community (EEC).

International Peace and Security Studies

Predoctoral Fellowships

Douglas W. Blum, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Columbia University, for (1) training in cognitive psychology and (2) research on Soviet modes of strategic thinking and the influence of Soviet and American perceptions of one another's behavior on their policies toward each other.

Richard A. Deck, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University, for (1) training in Southeast Asian studies and (2) research on the creation of semi-autonomous regional economic and security regimes among newly-industrialized countries, focusing on ASEAN as a potential model for the future of the Third World.

David R. Fagelson, Ph.D. candidate in politics, University of Oxford, for (1) the study of the formulation and implementation of U.S. strategic military policy and (2) research seeking to determine whether the right to disobey military policy exists, by examining how the institutional structures of military policy formulation fit into the democratic and legal processes upon which the individual's obligation to obey is predicated.

Michael B. Froman, Ph.D. candidate in international relations, University of Oxford, for (1) training in British diplomatic history and European history of the late 19th and early 20th centuries and (2) research on the evolution of the concept of detente, from the Cuban missile crisis to the present.

Laura Guazzone, trainee in international security studies, Institute of International Affairs (Rome), for (1) training in comparative politics and the political economy of the Middle East and (2) research on the security perceptions underlying the political behavior of the Arab states.

Ronald Eric Herring, Ph.D. candidate in international politics, University College of Wales, for (1) the study of Soviet history, politics, and foreign and defense policy decisionmaking and (2) research on "nuclear blackmail" and related concepts referring to similarities and differences between U.S. and Soviet perspectives and behavior.

Thomas F. Homer-Dixon, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for (1) training in social psychology and (2) the exploration of aspects of past and current U.S.-Soviet relations, particularly how the culture, ideology, and political institutions of each superpower have affected the formation of its collective identity.

Gilbert Khadiagala, Ph.D. candidate in international relations, The Johns Hopkins University, for (1) the study of international diplomacy and alliance behavior and (2) research on the role of Africa's so-called "Frontline States" (Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania, and Zambia) in the management of regional conflicts in Southern Africa since 1975.

Rodger Payne, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Maryland, for (1) training in historical analysis and (2) research on the effect of the lessons of history upon policymakers, focusing upon the recurrence of strategic defense debates in the United States in the nuclear era.

Postdoctoral Fellowships

Sergio Aguayo, political scientist, El Colegio de Mexico, for (1) training in international security studies and (2) research which will identify threats to Mexican security and will define Mexican national security interests as distinct from those of the United States and other nations.

Javier G. Alcalde, political scientist, University of Lima, for (1) the study of the economic and technical aspects of development strategies followed by the Third World after 1945 and (2) an examination of typical problems of several small-debtor nations in Latin America, focusing on links between economic malaise, social decomposition, and revolutionary activity in an effort to identify the components essential to a successful development strategy.

Mohammed Ayoob, political scientist, The Australian National University, for (1) the study of the evolution of the superpowers' strategic balance, their projection of power in the Third World, their arms transfers and military assistance to Third World nations, and their economic influence over the Third World since 1945 and (2) research on the interaction of the global dynamics of superpower competition with the internal dynamics of crucial Third World regions.

Joanne Gowa, political scientist, University of Pennsylvania, for (1) training in the history of international security systems and (2) an explanation of the relative stability of bipolar and multipolar international political systems.

Anne-Marie Le Gloannec, political scientist, National Foundation for Political Science (Paris) for (1) training in military doctrines and technologies and (2) a comparative study of security interests and goals in East and West Germany.

Jack S. Levy, political scientist, University of Texas, for (1) interdisciplinary training in decision theory and (2) research on the causes of war in general and "inadvertent war" in particular.

Athassios G. Platias, Ph.D. candidate in government, Cornell University, for (1) the study of modern weapons technologies and (2) research on the extent to which technology determines the selection of a military strategy in small states; technologies will be compared to international and domestic structures as influences upon strategy.

Robert H. Sprinkle, physician and Ph.D. candidate at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public Affairs, Princeton University, for (1) the study of foreign and human rights policies and (2) research on the strategic implications of human rights and human welfare policies.

Yagil Weinberg, political scientist, University of Maryland, for (1) the study of the structure and operation of multinational corporations and the ways in which they are influenced by foreign investment and national governments and (2) research on the role multinational corporations play in bilateral relations between adversarial states and the extent to which they promote the non-violent resolution of interstate tensions.

Fellowships for Foreign Policy Studies

The following postdoctoral fellowships were awarded:

Judith L. Goldstein, assistant professor of political science, Stanford University, for research on the role of ideas and institutions in U.S. trade policy.

Robert O. Keohane, professor of government, Harvard University, for research on the changing significance of sovereignty in United States foreign policy.

John S. Odell, professor of political science, University of Southern California, for research on U.S. foreign policymaking as a process of simultaneous bargaining at home and abroad.

Robert S. Ross, lecturer in political science, Columbia University, for research on the international and domestic influences on the making of U.S. policy toward China since 1971.

Other Awards and Honors

Douglas C. Bennett, associate professor of political science, Temple University, has been chosen by the American Council on Education as one of its 1987-88 fellows. The fellows will participate in academic administration and policymaking.

Christian Buckrucker, professor/scientific researcher at the National University of Cuyo in Mendoza, Argentina, has been appointed a Fulbright Scholar in Residence for the 1987-88 academic year at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Ramesh Deosaran, senior lecturer, Faculty of Social Sciences, University of the West Indies (Trinidad) has been awarded a Fulbright Advanced Research Award to conduct a comparative study of judicial responses to problems related to multicultural communities. During this four-month award, Deosaran will be researching at Center for the Study of Law and Society at University of California (Berkeley), University of Hawaii at Manoa, and

People in Political Science

Janie Leatherman will conduct doctoral research in Finland under the auspices of the Fulbright program.

John Jay College of Criminal Justice at City University of New York.

Belden Fields, of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, received a College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and a University Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching for 1987.

Edward S. Greenberg, professor of political science, University of Colorado, Boulder, has received the Dean's Writing Prize in the Social Sciences for his book Workplace Democracy (Cornell University Press).

Kenneth Janda, professor in the department of political science, Northwestern University, has been named as the Payson S. Wild Chair of Political Science.

Booker T. Ingram, Presbyterian College, has been named a Belk Fellow in recognition and support of distinguished scholarship.

Peter Augustine Lawler, associate professor of political science, is the 1987 recipient of the Carden Award, given to a Berry faculty member each year for outstanding teaching, scholarship, and service. He is the third recipient of this award, established in 1985.

Janie Leatherman, a Ph.D. candidate at the Graduate School of International Studies at University of Denver, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to conduct doctoral research in Finland, the Board of Foreign Scholarships, and the U.S. Information Agency. The award supplements a $7,500 American-Scandinavian Foundation Fellowship awarded to her for dissertation research in international studies at the University of Helsinki and the Finnish Institute of International Affairs.

Christopher H. Pyle received a travel grant in the July 1987 competition sponsored by the American Council of Learned Societies. Pyle plans to attend the Conference on International Criminal Law in Siracusa, Italy, December 6-9, 1987.

David Rosenfeld, department of political science, Columbia University, received a 1987 pre-dissertation fellowship from the Council for European Studies for "Rousseau and Geneva: A Re-Examination."

Edward J. Sidlow, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Northwestern University, was a recipient of the College of Arts and Sciences Award for Outstanding Teaching for the 1986-87 academic year.

Kimberly Ann Stanton, University of Chicago, received a Tinker Foundation field research grant 1986-87 for "Capitalism and Democracy: Institutional Conditions for Consent in Chile." (In a previous issue of PS, we incorrectly stated that Stanton was affiliated with Stanford University.)

Patricia Lee Sykes has been named a Lilly Teaching Fellow for 1987-88 by the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Patricia Sykes, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, has been named a Lilly Teaching Fellow for the 1987-88 academic year.

Michael D. Ward, professor of political science, University of Colorado, Boulder, has received the Karl Deutsch Award of the International Studies Association.

Marvin Weinbaum, of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, received a Burlington Northern Foundation Faculty Achievement Award for 1987.

Thomas C. Wiegale has been named Presidential Research Professor at Northern Illinois University.

In Memoriam

William N. Chambers

William N. Chambers, professor emeritus at Washington University, died June 5 after a long illness. He was 70 years old.

Bill Chambers did his undergraduate work at Harvard and received his Ph.D. from Washington University in 1949. For much of his career he devoted his scholarly attention to the role of political parties in democratic society, and was an influential contributor to both theory and substantive research on the origins and growth of political parties in the United States.

His first major book was a political biography of Senator Thomas Hart Benton, and thereafter he wrote extensively on party development, focusing especially on the Democratic Party. His Political Parties in a New Nation (1963) was widely admired, and The American Party Systems (edited with W. D. Burnham, 1967) quickly came to be seen as a landmark for both historians and political scientists.

Bill Chambers was an exceptionally broad-gauged scholar with wide-ranging interests and enthusiasm for bringing historically grounded investigation into theoretically informed focus. He was an active member of the Washington University Department of Political Science until 1965 when he accepted the Chair of the Department of History. Whatever his department might be, however, he worked closely with students and colleagues of diverse disciplinary perspectives.

In 1975 Bill was forced into early retirement by Alzheimer's disease. He is survived by his wife, Susan, three children and three grandchildren.

Robert H. Salisbury
Washington University, St. Louis

Manning J. Dauer

Manning J. Dauer was a distinguished service professor emeritus in the department of political science at the University of Florida, where he began his teaching career in 1930. Leaving to obtain his Ph.D. at the University of Illinois, he returned to Florida as a faculty member in 1933 and remained until his retirement in 1980, except for service in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II. He was the first chairman of the department of political science and served in that position from 1950 through 1975. He died on January 11, 1987.

Always acknowledged for his leadership at the University of Florida, Dauer also had an important impact on the state of Florida. From the thousands of students he taught came senators, congressmen, federal and state judges, governors, state legislators, state cabinet officers, business and professional leaders. The U.S. Supreme Court used his scholarly research in decisions on malapportionment. He served as an advisor to many state administrations and had a major role in drafting Florida's pioneering "government in the sunshine" law.

Dauer remained an active scholar with primary interests in political theory and American politics. His first book, The Adams Federalists, is still the definitive study of that subject. His extensive scholarship included several other books, chapters in books, and fifty articles in professional journals. He served as vice-president of the American Political Sci-