

CONTRIBUTORS

SETH BERNSTEIN is Assistant Professor of History at the Higher School of Economics in Moscow. He is finishing a book about Stalinist youth culture called Communist Upbringing under Stalin: Young Communists and War in a Socialist Society, 1929–1945 (Cornell University Press). His current project explores the repatriation of Soviet citizens after World War II. His work has appeared in Kritika, Memory Studies and Russian Review.

JASON CIEPLY is a Lecturer in Slavic Languages and Literatures at Stanford University. His research examines the interrelation of voice, affect, and ideology in Russian culture from the nineteenth century until the present day. His dissertation, “Voices of Enthusiasm: the Mobilization of Revolutionary Emotion in Early Soviet Literature and Culture,” explores how revolutionary affect was thematized and voiced by early Soviet artists. He also studies constructions of post-Soviet subjectivity in contemporary Russian culture.

MICHAEL DAVID-FOX is Professor in the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service and Department of History at Georgetown University, and Scholarly Supervisor at the Centre for the History and Sociology of World War II and its Consequences at the National Research University–Higher School of Economics. He is author, most recently, of Crossing Borders: Modernity, Ideology, and Culture in Russia and the Soviet Union (2015) and editor, most recently, of The Soviet Gulag: Evidence, Interpretation, and Comparison (forthcoming, 2016).

FRANZISKA EXELER is a Junior Research Fellow at Magdalene College and a Mellon Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Centre for History and Economics, University of Cambridge. She also teaches Russian, east European, Eurasian, and global history at Free University Berlin. She is currently completing a book titled “Wartime Ghosts: Nazi Occupation and Its Aftermath in the Soviet Union,” which is based on her dissertation that she defended at Princeton University.

KRISTY IRONSIDE is a Lecturer in Russian, East European and Eurasian history at the University of Manchester (UK). She was a postdoctoral research fellow at the International Center for the History and Sociology of WWII and its Consequences at the National Research University–Higher School of Economics in 2014–2015. Her articles have appeared in Kritika: Explorations in Russian and Eurasian History and The Soviet and Post-Soviet Review. She is currently working on a monograph on the role and meaning of money in Soviet efforts to rebuild after WWII and advance toward communism.

PÅL KOLSTØ, Dr. Philos., is professor of Russian Studies, University of Oslo. He specializes in nation-building and nationalism in Russia and the western Balkans. He is the author/editor of eight books on these topics, including Political Construction Sites: Nation-building in Russia and the Post-Soviet States (2000), and, with Helge Blakkisrud, Nation-building and Common Values in Russia

(2004) and The New Russian Nationalism: Imperialism, Ethnicity and Authoritarianism 2000–2015 (Edinburgh University Press, 2016).

JARED MCBRIDE completed his PhD in 2014 at UCLA. His research focuses on nationalist movements, the Holocaust, and interethnic violence in twentieth-century eastern Europe. He has been a visiting assistant professor at Columbia University, Title VIII scholar at the Kennan Institute, Margee and Douglas Greenberg Fellow at USC, and Ben & Zelda Cohen Fellow at USHMM. His work has appeared in Ab Imperio, Kritika, and Carl Beck Papers and he is completing a book manuscript on local violence during the Nazi occupation of Volhynia. He is currently a lecturer at UCLA.

VLADIMIR SOLONARI is associate professor at the Department of History, University of Central Florida. He received his Ph.D. in history from Moscow State University in 1986. He is the author of “Purifying the Nation: Population Exchange and Ethnic Cleansing in Nazi-Allied Romania” (Woodrow Wilson Center Press and Johns Hopkins University Press, 2010) as well as of a number of articles and essays on Romanian, Moldovan, and Soviet history. His research focuses on World War II in southeastern Europe and ethnic cleansing and the Holocaust. He is currently completing his second book-length project on the social history of southern Ukraine under the Romanian occupation during World War II.