Contributors

David Schiff teaches at Reed College, Portland, Oregon. The most recent edition of his indispensable The Music of Elliott Carter was published in the UK by Faber & Faber at the end of 1998.

Wilfrid Mellers is Emeritus Professor of Music at York University (whose Music Department he created and headed until his retirement in 1981), a composer and a prolific author since the 1940s. His many books include Man and his Music (written in conjunction with Alec Harman), Music in a New Found Land, The Masks of Orpheus, Vaughan Williams and the Vision of Albion and, most recently, the essay-collection Between Old Worlds and New.

Malcolm D Robertson is a composer and has a keen interest in 20th-century American Music, especially that of Harris, Piston and Schuman.

Anthony Gritten is a lecturer in music at the University of East Anglia, Norwich and a fellow of the Royal College of Organists.

Edward McKeon is a freelance music journalist with a research interest in Russian-Soviet music, aesthetics and cultural policy.

Peter Quinn helped the Royal Academy of Music organize their Arvo Pärt festival in March.

Robert Stein has published poetry and literary criticism as well as concert reviews.

Annalise Plummer is currently studying for a PhD on Mahler's early works at Gonville & Caius College, Cambridge. Her previous research has included an MPhil on Brahms's Vocal Duets, and a Research Fellowship at the Zentrabibliothek in Zurich, where she studied the music of the Swiss composer, Hans Schaeuble.

Richard Tiedman has for many years been a regular contributor to the American Record Guide.
