

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

MAGALI A. DELMAS is a professor of management at the Institute of the Environment and Sustainability and the Anderson School of Management at the University of California, Los Angeles. She is the director of the UCLA Center for Corporate Environmental Performance and a UCLA Luskin Scholar. She is also an affiliated professor of the Donald Bren School of Environmental Science and Management at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Standing at the crossroads of policy and management, her research interests focus on the various interactions between environmental policy and business strategy at the national and international levels. E-mail: delmas@ucla.edu.

DANIEL A. DIERMEIER is the IBM Professor of Regulation and Competitive Practice of Managerial Economics and Decision Sciences at the Kellogg School of Management, as well as a professor of political science at the Weinberg College of Arts and Sciences at Northwestern University. He currently serves as director of the Ford Motor Company Center for Global Citizenship. Prof. Diermeier received his Ph.D. in political science from the University of Rochester. His work focuses on political institutions, reputation management, political and regulatory risk, crisis management, and integrated strategy. E-mail: d-diermeier@kellogg.northwestern.edu.

JONATHAN DOH holds the Herbert G. Rammrath Chair in International Business, serves as founding director of the Center for Global Leadership, and is a professor of management at the Villanova School of Business. Jonathan is author or co-author of more than sixty refereed articles in journals such as Academy of Management Review, Organization Science, Strategic Management Journal, and Journal of International Business Studies. He is co-editor or author of seven books, including NGOs and Corporations: Conflict and Collaboration (with Michael Yaziji; Cambridge University Press, 2009). E-mail: jonathan.doh@villanova.edu.

ADAM D. GALINSKY is the Morris and Alice Kaplan Professor of Ethics and Decision in Management at the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University. He received his Ph.D. from Princeton University in social psychology and his B.A. from Harvard University. He has published more than 130 scientific articles, chapters, and teaching cases in the fields of management and social psychology. His research and teaching focus on leadership, power, negotiations, decision-making, diversity, and ethics. E-mail: agalinsky@kellogg.northwestern.edu.

JENNIFER JORDAN is an assistant professor of human resource management and organizational behavior and a Rosalind Franklin Fellow at the University of Groningen. She researches questions related to power, ethics, leadership, and the intersection between these topics. She received her Ph.D., M.S., and M. Phil. in social psychology from Yale University. E-mail: j.jordan@rug.nl.

JOHN KAY is one of Britain's leading economists. As research director and director of the Institute for Fiscal Studies he established it as one of Britain's most respected think tanks. Since then he has been a professor at the London Business School and the University of Oxford, and is currently a visiting professor at the London School of Economics. He is the author of many books, including The Truth about Markets (2003) and The Long and the Short of It: Finance and Investment for Normally Intelligent People Who Are Not in the Industry (2009). His latest book is Obliquity, which was published by Profile Books in March 2010. He also contributes a weekly column to the Financial Times. johnkay@johnkay.com.

ARNO KOURULA (D.Sc. Econ, Helsinki School of Economics) is a postdoctoral research fellow at Stanford University and an assistant professor at University of Amsterdam Business School. His research interests are corporate responsibility and cross-sector interaction. His articles have appeared in such journals as Business Ethics Quarterly, Business & Society, Corporate Governance, Energy Policy, Journal of Business Ethics, and Journal of World Business. E-mail: A.E.Kourula@uva.nl.

JUKKA MÄKINEN, Ph.D., is a post-doctoral fellow in the Department of Management and International Business at the Aalto University School of Business. He approaches the political and socio-economic roles of businesses in a society from the perspective of the contemporary theories of social justice. He is engaged in various research projects and networks in the fields of political philosophy, business ethics, and corporate social responsibility studies. His research appears in Business Ethics Quarterly, Utilitas, Journal of Sustainable Tourism, and other journals and books. E-mail: Jukka.Makinen@aalto.fi.

ANDREAS RASCHE is Professor of Business in Society at Copenhagen Business School. His research focuses on multi-stakeholder initiatives (particularly the UN Global Compact), the political role of corporations in transnational governance, and the governance of global supply networks. He regularly contributes to international journals in his field of study. He co-edited The United Nations Global Compact: Achievements, Trends and Challenges (Cambridge University Press, 2010). His latest book, Building the Responsible Enterprise (with Sandra Waddock), was published by Stanford University Press (2012). More information is available at: <http://www.arasche.com>. Email: ara.ikl@cbs.dk.

JEFFERY SMITH is associate professor of business ethics and Director of the Banta Center for Business, Ethics and Society at the University of Redlands. He is also adjunct professor of ethics at the Keck Graduate Institute for Applied Life Sciences. Professor Smith's current research examines the normative foundations of corporate social responsibility and has appeared in journals such as Business Ethics Quarterly and Ethical Theory and Moral Practice. E-mail: Jeffery\_Smith@redlands.edu.

FLORIAN WETTSTEIN is director of the Institute for Business Ethics at University of St. Gallen in Switzerland. Previously, he was assistant professor in the Department of Ethics and Business Law at Opus College of Business, University of St. Thomas (Minneapolis/St. Paul) and a research fellow at MIT's Program on Human Rights and Justice. His research focuses on business and human rights, Corporate Social Responsibility, the political role and responsibility of multinational corporations, and business/economic ethics in general. He is the author of Multinational Corporations and Global Justice: Human Rights Obligations of a Quasi-Governmental Institution (Stanford University Press, 2009). E-mail: florian.wettstein@unisg.ch.

GLEN WHELAN is lecturer in business ethics at the International Centre for Corporate Social Responsibility, Nottingham University Business School. His research interests revolve around political corporate social responsibility and multinational corporations. Amongst other things, he is currently completing projects on the role and importance of states for corporate social responsibility; Chinese state-owned enterprises and human rights; and actor-centered institutional theories of corporate social responsibility. E-mail: glen.whelan@nottingham.ac.uk.