

IDEAS OF REVELATION

An Historical Study A.D. 1700—A.D. 1860

H. D. McDONALD Vice-Principal, London Bible College

Dr. McDonald discusses the doctrine of Revelation adopted by the early church, in the light of present-day ideas on the subject.

CORPUS CHRISTI

PROF. GEDDES MACGREGOR

One result of the present conversations between the Church of England and the Church of Scotland on reunion or some measure of inter-communion has been that both Churches have been canonically enjoined to study the theological principles involved. This admirable account of the belief, practices and evolution of the Presbyterian Church is written in a spirit of obedience to this injunction.

Retreat from Truth

By G. R. G. MURE

Warden of Merton College, Oxford

Medium 8vo; 255 pp.

31s. 6d. net

THE author contends that classical British empiricism is an ersatz philosophy which springs from the Englishman's native practical bent. He sketches an idealist theory of values on the assumption that British philosophers have taken the wrong road and might well retrace their steps to look again at the signpost.

Wittgenstein's Tractatus

A Critical Exposition

By ERIK STENIUS

Professor of Philosophy in the University of Finland

Medium 8vo; about 240 pp.

About 27s. 6d. net

THE author of this commentary has tried to base his interpretation—or rather the different possible interpretations suggested by him—on a careful analysis of the general structure of the Tractatus, of the terminology used in it and of the interrelations between its different statements.

Rights and Right Conduct

By A. I. MELDEN

Associate Professor of Philosophy, University of Washington

Demy 8vo; about 96 pp.

12s. 6d. net

AN inquiry is made into the distinctive features of situations in which one person has a special right vis-à-vis another. How a special right, such as that of a parent to special consideration from his offspring, derives from the matter-of-fact status of the person as parent and at the same time functions as a consideration that justifies conduct as right or morally required, are the central problems posed for discussion.

Crucial Problems of Modern Philosophy

D. J. B. HAWKINS 10/6 net

"Dr. Hawkins unites a trenchant independence of thought with the national method of cautious analysis and lucid, simple style . . . even critics will find his understanding of these crucial problems clarified and placed in fine relief by this unpretentious volume of essays."

Philosophical Studies

Introduction to Western Philosophy

RUSSELL COLEBURT 18/- net

"By taking the main problems in more or less chronological order in which they appeared Mr Coleburt manages with considerable success to combine an introduction to philosophy with an introduction to its history."
