

AVI CHOMSKY, Assistant Professor of History at Bates College, recently completed a book entitled "A Perfect Slavery": West Indian Workers and the United Fruit Company in Costa Rica, 1870–1950 (forthcoming from Louisiana State University Press). She is currently researching the social impact of U.S. sugar companies in Oriente, Cuba, from 1898 to 1959.

The dissertation fieldwork of LES W. FIELD, which focused on revolutionary social change among Nicaraguan artisans, forms the basis for his forthcoming book entitled War, Revolution, and Afterward: The Changing Identities of Artisan Communities in Western Nicaragua. He has also written about his research among indigenous peoples in Colombia, Ecuador, and California.

Associate Professor of Geography and Anthropology at Louisiana State University, JILL BRODY is an anthropological linguist and editor of the Journal of Mayan Linguistics. She works on the conversation and discourse of Tojolab'al Mayan, which is spoken in Chiapas, Mexico.

AARON SEGAL, Professor of Political Science at the University of Texas at El Paso, is the author of An Atlas of International Migration (published by Bowker in 1993) and seven other books.

J. CORDELL ROBINSON is Professor of Latin American History at California State University, San Bernardino. The author of El movimiento gaitanista en Colombia, he is currently researching various aspects of the history of Colombian international relations.

ERRATUM

The following note on a contributor to LARR volume 29, number 2 was inadvertently omitted from that issue. Christopher H. Lutz and W. George Lovell coauthored "Conquest and Population: Maya Demography in Historical Perspective."

CHRISTOPHER H. LUTZ cofounded the Centro de Investigaciones Regionales de Mesoamérica in Antigua, Guatemala. He is the author of Santiago de Guatemala, 1541–1773: City, Caste, and the Colonial Experience and coeditor with Robert M. Carmack and John D. Early of Historical Demography of Highland Guatemala.