Confucian Thought: Selfhood as Creative Transformation

Tu Wei-Ming

"Over the last two decades, Tu Wei-Ming has been developing a systematic interpretation of classical and Neo-Confucianism, and has been translating his insights into concepts and vocabularies understandable to a Western audience. Its most outstanding feature, I think, is that this interpretation revitalizes Confucian thought to make it a legitimate concern of contemporary philosophical reflection." —*Roger T. Ames, University of Hawaii.

Tu weaves philosophic, historical, anthropological, sociological, and psychological perspectives into a coherent discussion of the Confucian themes that continue to inspire the modern intellectual mind. His is a vital contribution to Chinese thought and religion. 196 pp. $14.95 pb. Please add $1.50 for postage and handling.

The Social Life of Things

Commodities in Cultural Perspective

Editor: Arjun Appadurai

The contributors to this volume examine how things are sold and traded in a variety of social and cultural settings, both present and past. They illuminate the ways in which people find value in things and things give value to social relations, to reveal that beneath the seeming infinitude of human wants, and the apparent multiplicity of material forms, there are complex, but specific, social and political mechanisms that regulate taste, trade and desire.

Contributors: Arjun Appadurai, Igor Kopyroff, William Davenport, Alfred Gell, Colin Renfrew, Patrick Geary, Brian Spooner, Lee Cassanelli, William Reddy, Christopher Bayly.

The State and Peasant Politics in Sri Lanka

Mick Moore

The author looks in detail at the dominant features of contemporary Sri Lanka: the political consequences of the plantation experience; the persistence of elite political leadership; and the causes and consequences of ethnic conflict. He argues that the pattern of political activity is within the sphere of politics itself and is not simply a derivative of conflicts within the economic sphere.

Women in the Shanghai Cotton Mills,
1919-1949

Emily Honig. The majority of cotton mill workers in China's largest industrial center prior to 1949 were women, and this book is one of the first to examine their historical experience. The author shows why women in Shanghai rarely participated in the radical labor movement of the 1920's, and traces their gradual politicization in the next two decades to the point that a strike against mill owners in 1948 was led primarily by women. We are also given rich information on women's daily lives both inside and outside the mills, and on the kinds of social relationships they formed with other women to exercise some degree of control over their lives. $37.50

The Workers of Tianjin

1900-1949

Gail Hershatter. Until now the history of the Chinese working class has been covered primarily through accounts of union formation and strikes. This new book creates a history of working people in Tianjin (Tientsin) based on an urban history of the modern city and on vivid case studies of workers in three different sectors—ironworking, transport, and textile manufacture. The author focuses on the uneven physical growth and capitalist development of the city, on working-class culture and consciousness, and on the role workers played in shaping Tianjin's identity as a major port city. The case studies emphasize the roles of women and children in the labor force. $35.00
