

Activities

Chun-tu Hsueh, Huang Hsing Foundation, was elected a foreign member of the National Academy of Sciences of Ukraine and honorary fellow of the Institute of East European, Russian and Central Asian Studies, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences.

Robert S. Jordan, Research Professor of International Institutions, University of New Orleans, had his most recent book, International Organizations: A Comparative Approach to the Management of Co-operation, published in July 2001 by Greenwood/Praeger.

David Lawrence, professor of political science, Westmont College, was a Fulbright lecturer in American Government and Civic Education at Ukraine's University of Kyiv-Mohyla Academy during the Spring 2001 semester.

Stanley Renshon, professor, City University of New York, has been elected president of the International Society of Political Psychology for 2002–2003.

Additionally, he recently received the following research fellowships: Irving Louis Horowitz Foundation for research on presidential leadership and the dilemmas of diversity; the Joan Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy, Harvard University, for work on character issues in the 2000 presidential election; City University of New York, Faculty Research Award on the President's Initiative on Race and the Dilemmas of American Diversity; Institute on Race and Social Division, Boston University, for research on President's Initiative on Race and the dilemmas of American diversity; The Center for Immigration Studies research fellowship to conduct studies of American national identity in an era of diversity. His eighth book, One America? Political Leadership, National Identity, and the Dilemmas of Diversity, will be published by Georgetown University Press in the fall of 2001.

Shalendra Sharma, director, Graduate Program in Asia Pacific Studies, University of San Francisco, has been appointed editor of the new online academic journal, Asia Pacific Perspectives.

Henry B. Sirgo, professor of political science, McNeese State University, served as co-project director with Micheal Tarver of a Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities Summer Teacher Institute entitled "2001: An Environmental Odyssey."

Administrative Appointments

Richard Chilcoat, dean and Ed and Howard Kruse Chair in Government and Public Service, George Bush School of Government and Public Service, Texas A&M University, formerly National Defense University.

Richard A. Clucas, chair, political science division, Portland State University.

Harvey Feigenbaum, associate dean, Elliott School of International Relations, George Washington University.

Myron Gutmann, director, The Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research; formerly director, Population Research Center and professor of history, University of Texas, Austin.

Charles F. Hermann, Brent Scowcroft Chair in International Affairs and Director, Masters in International Affairs Program, George Bush School of Government and Public Service, Texas A&M University.

Hank Jenkins-Smith, Joe R. and Teresa Lozano Long Chair in Government and Business, George Bush School of Government and Public Service, Texas A&M University, formerly University of New Mexico.

David J. Lanoue, chair, department of political science, University of Alabama.

Stephen Macedo, director, University Center for Human Values, Princeton University.

L. Sandy Maisel, chair, department of government, Colby College.

Scott McElwain, chair, European Studies Program, University of San Francisco, has been appointed Coordinator of the new USF campus in Budapest, Hungary.

Gerald Pomper, interim director, Walt Whitman Center for the Culture and Politics of Democracy, Rutgers University.

FOR THE RECORD

Gutmann Named Provost at Princeton

Amy Gutmann, professor of politics at Princeton University and the founding director of its University Center for Human Values, has been appointed provost, the second-ranking officer at the university.

A political theorist who has written extensively about race and civic participation, Gutmann has been at Princeton since 1976, serving as Laurence S. Rockefeller University Professor since 1990. She served as Princeton's dean of faculty from 1995 to 1997 and as academic advisor to the president from 1997 to 1998.

Her most recent books include Democratic Education, Democracy and Disagreement and Ethics and Politics (both with Dennis Thompson); Freedom of Association; and Color Conscious: The Political Morality of Race (with Anthony Appiah), which won the 1997 APSA Ralph J. Bunche Award.

Gutmann is currently president of the American Society for Political and Legal Philosophy. She is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and of the National Academy of Education, and is a founding member of the Executive Committee of the Association of Practical and Professional Ethics. She received her B.A. from Harvard-Radcliffe College, her M.Sc. from the London School of Economics, and her Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Alan Saltzstein, chair, division of political science and criminal justice, California State University, Fullerton.

Ruth Ann Strickland, chair, department of political science and criminal justice, Appalachian State University.

Arnold Vedlitz, Bob Bullock Chair in Government and Public Service and director, Institute for Science, Technology and Public Policy, George Bush School of Government and Public Service, Texas A&M University.

William F. West, director, Master of Public Service and Administration Program, George Bush School of Government and Public Service, Texas A&M University.

Craig M. Wheeland, chair, department of political science, Villanova University.

New Appointments

Maryann Barakso, assistant professor, department of government, American University.

Benjamin R. Barber, Kekst Professor of Civil Society, Elkins System-wide Professor, University of Maryland and professor, department of government and politics and School of Public Affairs, University of Maryland, College Park; formerly, Rutgers University.

Louis Bickford, senior associate, International Center for Transitional Justice.

Robert Bifulco, assistant professor, department of political science and Institute of Public Affairs, University of Connecticut.

Joel R. Campbell, professor of economics, Center for International Education, Kansai Gaidai University, Japan.

Rachel Paine Caufield, assistant professor, department of politics and international relations, Drake University.

Jeffrey T. Checkel, professor of political science, and research professor, ARENA, University of Oslo.

Harold D. Clarke, Ashbel Smith Distinguished Professor, department of political science, University of Texas, Dallas. Clarke will also serve as coeditor of Electoral Studies.

R. Scott Crichlow, assistant professor, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Kenneth J. Meier, Charles Puryear Professor of Liberal Arts at Texas A&M University, has been named Sara Lindsey Chair in Government and acting director of the Center for Presidential Studies, Policy & Governance at the university's George Bush School of Government and Public Service. His current research agenda includes a major initiative in race, ethnicity, and public policy; the development of innovative new methodologies to study political phenomena; and deriving a new theory of public policy.

Soo Yeon Kim has been appointed an assistant professor in department of government and politics at the University of Maryland, College Park. Kim earned her Ph.D. in 1998 from Yale University.

Michele DeMary, has joined the faculty in the department of political science at Susquehanna University as an assistant professor. She recently completed her doctoral work at the University of Massachusetts. She will teach public law and legal studies, American political institutions, and women and politics.

Mark I. Lichbach, has joined the department of government and politics at the University of Maryland, College Park as a full professor. He leaves the University of California, Riverside. His current research involves antiglobalization protests in the United States and around the world.

Edward McMahon has been named Dean's Professor of Applied Politics in the department of political science at Binghamton University, SUNY. He also serves as Director of the Center on Democratic Performance. Before joining the Binghamton faculty in 1999, he served as a senior staff member of the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs.

Larry D. Terry, has joined the University of Texas, Dallas as associate provost and professor of public administration. Before arriving at UTD, Terry served as assistant dean for graduate programs and professor of public administration in the Maxine Goodman College of Urban Affairs at Cleveland State University. Terry currently serves as editor of the Public Administration Review.

Cecelia Lynch, associate professor in the department of political science at the University of California, Irvine, has received the Edgar J. Furniss Prize of the Mershon Center for International Security Studies at Ohio State University, and the Myrna Bernath Book Prize of the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations for her first book, Beyond Appeasement: Interpreting Interwar Peace Movements in World Politics (Cornell University Press 1999).

Juan Carlos Huerta has been promoted to associate professor with tenure in the department of social sciences at Texas A&M University, Corpus Christi. A University of Houston Ph.D., Huerta joined the department in 1995. He recently published an article in the Social Science Quarterly.

James L. Gibson, Sidney W. Souers Professor of Government at Washington University is serving as a visiting scholar at the Russell Sage Foundation for 2001–2002. Gibson will be working on a book on whether truth leads to reconciliation in South Africa. He is also a visiting professor at the University of Stellenbosch and a Distinguished Visiting Research Scholar at the Institute for Justice and Reconciliation, both in South Africa.

Gwyneth Williams, an associate professor in the department of history, politics and law at Webster University, received the university's 2001 William T. Kemper Award for Excellence in Teaching. She earned her Ph.D. from Princeton University and currently focuses her teaching and research on American politics, women and politics, constitutional law, and civil liberties.

Kevin R. den Dulk, assistant professor, department of political science, Grand Valley State University; formerly University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Christopher M. Duncan, professor and chair, department of political science, University of Dayton; formerly Mississippi State University.

Jennifer L. Erkulwater, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Richmond.

Martha Humphries Ginn, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Virginia Hettinger, assistant professor, department of political science and the Institute of Public Affairs, University of Connecticut.

Aaron M. Hoffman, assistant professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Marc Morjé Howard, assistant professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park; formerly University of California, Santa Cruz.

Joseph Jozwiak, assistant professor, department of social sciences, Texas A&M University, Corpus Christi.

Miki Caul Kittilson, assistant professor, department of political science, Binghamton University, SUNY.

Katie Verlin Laatikainen, assistant professor, department of political science, Adelphi University.

David J. Lanoue, professor, department of political science, University of Alabama.

Angela Lewis, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Alabama.

Andrea Lopez, assistant professor, department of political science, Susquehanna University.

Kimberly Morgan, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Suzanne L. Parker, assistant professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Scott Pegg, assistant professor in international relations, department of political science, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis; formerly Bilkent University, Turkey.

Christopher Reenock, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Alabama.

Mark Robbins, assistant professor, department of political science and Institute of Public Affairs, University of Connecticut; formerly University of Georgia.

F. David Rueda, assistant professor, department of political science, Binghamton University, SUNY.

John G. Ruggie, Evron and Jeanne Kirkpatrick Professor of International Affairs, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University.

John T. Scholz, Francis Eppes Professor of Political Science, Florida State University.

David W. Schwieder, assistant professor, department of political science, Susquehanna University.

Carol L. Silva, assistant professor, department of political science, Texas A&M University.

Evelyn Simien, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

William Simonsen, associate professor and director of the MPA program, department of political science and Institute of Public Affairs, University of Connecticut, formerly University of Oregon.

Mark Stephan, assistant professor, department of political science, Washington State University, Vancouver.

Walter Stone, professor and chair, department of political science, University of California, Davis.

Jaroslav Tir, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Alabama.

Lisa Pace Vetter, assistant professor, department of government, American University.

Erik Voeten, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

David L. Weiden, assistant professor, department of political science, United States Naval Academy.

Janelle Wong, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Southern California.

Promotions

Stephen R. Bowers, professor, department of political science, James Madison University.

John Constantelos, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Grand Valley State University.

Anthony J. Corrado, professor of government, Colby College.

Carlene J. Edie, professor, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Leela Fernandes, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Rutgers University.

James Gimpel, professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Mark Graber, professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Reinhard Heinisch, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Alan Levine, associate professor with tenure, department of government, American University.

Tukumbi Lumumba-Kasongo, professor of political science, Wells College.

A. James McAdams, Dr. William M. Scholl Professor of International Affairs, University of Notre Dame.

Jeffery J. Mondak, LeRoy Collins Professor of Political Science, Florida State University.

Irwin Morris, associate professor with tenure, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Nicolai N. Petro, professor, department of political science, University of Rhode Island.

Dean Robinson, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Massachusetts.

Cindy Simon Rosenthal, associate professor, department of political science, and associate director, Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center, University of Oklahoma.

Brad R. Roth, associate professor of political science and legal studies with tenure, Wayne State University.

David Skidmore, full professor, department of politics and international relations, Drake University.

Jennifer Sterling-Folker, associate professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Valerie A. Sulfaro, associate professor, department of political science, James Madison University.

Shibley Telhami, professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Robin L. Teske, professor, department of political science, James Madison University.

Vincent Wei-cheng Wang, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Richmond.

Retirements

Robert Gilmour, professor emeritus, department of political science and Institute of Public Affairs, University of Connecticut.

Ted Robert Gurr, professor emeritus, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Vincent L. Marando, professor emeritus, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Clarence Stone, professor emeritus, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Ronald J. Terchek, professor emeritus, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Dad Walker, professor emeritus, department of political science and Institute of Public Affairs, University of Connecticut.

Eduard Ziegenhagen, professor, department of political science, Binghamton University, SUNY.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Mark Brewer, visiting assistant professor of government, department of government, Colby College.

Marian Currinder, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, College of Charleston.

Jennifer Dineen, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Richard Marcus, visiting assistant professor, department of government, Colby College.

Nancy Quirk, visiting assistant professor, department of government and environmental studies program, Colby College.

Awards

ACLS Names 2001 Winners

The American Council of Learned Societies announced the results of its 2000–2001 fellowships and grants competitions during the summer. Among the winners were seven political scientists. They include:

Hilary Appel, assistant professor of government, Claremont McKenna College, a grant for East European Studies for a project, “Bringing Ideology Back In: Rethinking Privatization in Post-Communist Economics.”

Amy Bridges, professor of political science, University of California, San Diego, an ACLS Fellowship for a project, “The Western States in the Progressive Era.”

Wendy Brown, professor of political science and women’s studies, University of California, Berkeley, an ACLS Fellowship for a project, “Tolerance in the age of Identity.”

Valerie J. Bunce, professor of government, Cornell University, a grant for East European Studies for a project, “Capitalist Encounters.”

Eben Friedman, doctoral candidate in political science, University of California,

Of Note

Raphael Sonenshein, a political science professor at California State University, Fullerton, and a noted authority on Los Angeles governance, has been selected by the John Randolph Haynes and Dora Haynes Foundation to serve as the new Haynes Fellow.

During his 18-month tenure, which began in July, Sonenshein will play a role in leading the Foundation’s Governance Initiative, recently launched to stimulate more scholarship on local governance and public service delivery options for the Los Angeles region. Sonenshein has been a member of the Cal State Fullerton faculty since 1982 and has written extensively on the politics and governance of Los Angeles for various publications. His book, Politics in Black and White: Race and Power in Los Angeles, received the 1994 APSA Ralph J. Bunche Award. Research for the book was funded by a Haynes Foundation grant.

Outside academia, Sonenshein recently directed two successful charter reform movements, serving from 1996–1999 as Executive Director of the City of Los Angeles (Appointed) Charter Reform Commission, whose work led to the first successful comprehensive reform of the City Charter in 75 years, and as the lead consultant to Pasadena’s Charter Reform Task Force on School District Governance in 2000. Sonenshein is currently writing a book about the Los Angeles effort. Sonenshein received his B.A. in public policy from Princeton University, and his M.A. and Ph.D. in political science from Yale University.

nia, San Diego, an East European Studies fellowship for research and writing of his dissertation, “Ethnic Balances of Power and Political Integration of Stateless Minorities in pre- and post-Communist East Europe.”

Heather Williams, assistant professor of politics, Pomona College, an ACLS Fellowship for a project, “The New Global Politics of Food and Agriculture.”

Trevor L. Wysong, doctoral candidate in political science, University of Maryland, College Park, an East European Studies fellowship for research and writing of his dissertation, “Civil Society and Democracy in Post-Communist Romania.”

Policy Studies Organization Names 2001 Winners

The Policy Studies Organization presented its annual awards on August 29 in San Francisco.

Harold D. Lasswell Award, for outstanding scholarship in contributing to our understanding of the substance or process of public policy, to Arie Halachmi, Tennessee State University.

Donald Campbell Award, for being an outstanding methodological innovator in policy studies, to Charles Ragin, University of Arizona.

Hubert H. Humphrey Award, for being an outstanding public policy practitioner, to Matthew Holden Jr., University of Virginia.

Theodore Lowi Award, for the best article in the Policy Studies Journal in 2000, to Lars Carlsson, Lulea University, Sweden.

Jeffrey Pressman Award, for the best article in the Policy Studies Review in 2000, to Jo Marie Rios, Texas A&M University, Corpus Christi.

Thomas Dye Award, for outstanding service to the Policy Studies Organization, to Walter Beach, Heldref Publications.

Robert Lane Award, for outstanding service as a PSO president, to Harrell Rodgers, University of Houston.

Miriam K. Mills Award, for an outstanding young person in the policy studies field, to Michael Mintrom, Michigan State University.

Interdisciplinary Award, for an outstanding person working outside of political science who has been active in policy studies, to David Feldman, University of Tennessee-Knoxville.

Don Hadwiger Awards, for the best PSJ symposium in 2000, to Hans Th. A. Bressers, University of Twente, Netherlands, and Walter Rosenbaum, University of Florida, and for the best PSR symposium in 2000, to Cal Clark and Rene McEldowney, Auburn University.

Society for Comparative Research Presents 2001 Prizes

The Society for Comparative Research has announced the Mattei Dogan Prize and Seymour Martin Lipset Award for 2001. The Dogan prize, for the best comparativist book of the year, was awarded to Michele Lamont of Princeton University for The Dignity of Working Men (Harvard University Press). The Lipset Award, for the best comparativist dissertation, was awarded to Erin K. Jenne of Stanford University for her work, "Group Demands as Bargaining Positions: Signals, Cues, and Minority Mobilization in East Central Europe."

Other Award Winners

André Blais, professor, department of political science, Université de Montreal, has been awarded a Canada Research Chair in Electoral Studies. The chair provides financial support for research on voting and elections, and the impact of electoral rules on parties and voters.

Jeff Broadbent, associate professor, department of sociology, University of Minnesota, received the Masayoshi Ohira Memorial Prize in Japan for his book, Environmental Politics in Japan: Networks of Power and Protest (Cambridge University Press, 1998). The book also received the "Outstanding Publication Award 2000" from the Environment and Technology Section of the American Sociological Association.

John C. Creed, associate professor, department of political science, College of

KUDOS

The International Society for Political Psychology presented its 2001 Nevitt Sanford Award to Judith Torney-Purta of the department of human development at the University of Maryland, College Park. The presentation took place at the ISPP's annual meeting in Cuernavaca, Mexico.

The award committee recognized three aspects of Torney-Purta's research, recently published in a book entitled Citizenship and Education in Twenty-eight Countries: Civic Knowledge and Engagement at Age Fourteen: first, her leadership of the consensus process by which country representatives constructed a high-quality test in this challenging area; second, her book, for providing a map of attitudes relating to democracy as well civic knowledge among 90,000 young people; finally, an appreciation on behalf of psychologists and political scientists who will have rich opportunities for research on adolescents' political development when the data are released in July 2002.

Torney-Purta received her B.A. at Stanford University and her Ph.D. at the University of Chicago, where she did her first research in this field in the 1960's. She has been a professor of human development in the College of Education at the University of Maryland since 1981, teaching graduate and undergraduate courses on human development in the social context. She is also affiliate professor in the School of Public Affairs and an associate of the Comparative Education Program. She is a fellow of the American Psychological Association and the American Psychological Society.

Established in 1978, the Nevitt Sanford Award recognizes exemplary achievement in creating knowledge that can be applied to solve social or political problems.

Charleston, has received a Council of American Overseas Research Centers Fellowship to study in Jordan during the Fall 2001.

Patricia McGee Crotty, department of political science, East Stroudsburg University, received a Distinguished Professor Award for 2001–2002 school year from the university.

Paul F. Diehl, professor of political science, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign was for the third time the recipient of the Clarence Berdahl Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Instruction.

Robert Elias, chair, department of politics, University of San Francisco, has received the Frank Beach Award for Leadership in Service from USF and was one of the 10 finalists for the national Erlich Service Learning Award, sponsored by Campus Compact.

Roy B. Flemming, professor, department of political science, Texas A&M University, will be a Fulbright Research Scholar at the Institute of Canadian Studies, University of Ottawa, during Spring 2002. Flemming will research the strategic behavior of the Federal Court of Appeals, which has a predominantly administrative law jurisdiction, and the appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada to review these lower court decisions.

Joyce Gelb, professor, Graduate Center, CUNY, has received a National Science Foundation/Japan Society for the Promotion of Science grant to study equal employment and domestic violence policy in Japan for Fall 2001.

John Hibbing has been named Foundation Regents University Professor of Political Science, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Joseph Jupille, assistant professor, department of political science, Florida International University, was awarded the 2001 Prize for the Best Dissertation in European Union Studies by the European Union Studies Association for "Procedural Politics: Issues, Interests, and Institutional Choice in the European Union."

Mitchell A. Orenstein, assistant professor of political science, Maxwell School,

Syracuse University and fellow, Strengthening Democratic Institutions Project, Harvard University, has been awarded a MacArthur Foundation Research and Writing Grant in Security and Sustainability for his project, "Achieving Sustainability in Postcommunist Pension Reforms." This project examines the ways that more-democratic and less-democratic postcommunist states adapt and adopt global policies, by focusing on the diffusion of new models of pension reform.

Brad R. Roth, associate professor of political science, Wayne State University, was a recipient of a 2001 College of Liberal Arts Teaching Award.

Dorothy J. Solinger, professor, department of political science, University of California, Irvine, received the 2001 Joseph Levenson Prize for her book, Contesting Citizenship in Urban China (University of California Press 1999), from the Association for Asian Studies for the best book published on twentieth-century China.

Frédéric Belle Torimiro, associate professor of political science, Ferrum College, received the 2001 Faculty Appreciation Award from the Student Government Association in recognition of his outstanding contribution to the student body.