Nearly fifteen years after the fall of the Soviet Union, Cold War-era policies and concepts continue to affect U.S. relations with Russia. Despite many historic changes, there are still too few American experts with professional experience in the New Russia.

Promoting Understanding of the New Russia

CDS International and Alfa Bank are proud to launch a professional-level exchange program designed to foster a new generation of American decision-makers with meaningful, direct experience and expertise in Russia.

The Alfa Fellowship Program will begin with a three-week seminar program in Moscow with key Russian government, media, social, cultural, and private sector officials to discuss current issues facing Russia. Fellows will then complete professional assignments with private companies, media outlets, think-tanks, NGOs, or in various levels of Russian federal, regional, and local government. Eligible candidates must have at least beginning Russian language, a graduate degree, and professional experience in the fields of business, economics, journalism, law, government, or public policy. Monthly stipends, related travel costs, and housing provisions are included. For more information, application deadlines, and application forms please visit the Alfa Fellowship Program website or contact CDS International.

Applications must be received by CDS International no later than January 14, 2005. Application forms and instructions are available for download at:

THE HAGUE – THE NETHERLANDS

From Government to Governance The Growing Impact of Non-State Actors on the International and European Legal System

2003 Hague Joint Conference on Contemporary Issues of International Law

edited by Wybo P. Heere

The making, application and enforcement of international law are no longer confined to national States. A rapidly growing number of non-State actors also play a role. These actors are rather heterogeneous. Their role, representativeness and thus legitimacy greatly differ. However, they have in common that they challenge basic assumptions on which international law and international relations have been based. These challenges include the gradual replacement of traditional diplomatic relations by networks of national government officials interacting with one another across borders. These government networks are in turn often embedded in larger 'global policy networks' that involve a wide variety of non-state actors – NGOs, corporations, individual experts, and intergovernmental organizations. New forms of accountability for these non-State actors are also emerging. 'From Government to Governance' was the central topic of the 2003 Hague Joint Conference, a Conference attended by many practitioners and academics not only from the United States and Europe, but also from other parts of the globe. The second main topic was terrorism in its relation to international and/or criminal law. The variety of opinions made the discussions lively and worth listening to. Together with the introductions by the speakers, they are included in the present volume. They will challenge the reader to formulate his or her own opinion and to take part in the ongoing debate that should control and steer the march from Government to Governance. The accessibility of the contents is greatly enhanced by a Subject Index and an Index of Names.

This Sixth Hague Joint Conference was organized by 'The Hague Joint Conferences on International Law' Foundation, in which the American Society of International Law, the Netherlands Society of International Law, the Municipality of The Hague and the T.M.C. Asser Institute, The Hague, participate. The Conference was held in The Hague in July 2003.

Vital Books.

The Lesser Evil

Political Ethics in an Age of Terror

Michael Ignatieff

"We need calm, reasoned advice on how to balance the interests of security and liberty. We have it now in a remarkable book. Michael Ignatieff brings history, philosophy, law, and democratic morality to bear on the problem. That may sound daunting, but Ignatieff is such a forceful writer that it is a fascinating book."

What We Owe Iraq

War and the Ethics of Nation Building

Noah Feldman

Noah Feldman argues that to prevent U.S. "nation building" from turning into a colonialist charade, we urgently need a new approach. Drawing on his personal experiences in Iraq as a constitutional adviser, Feldman offers important insights into the power dynamics between the American occupiers and the Iraqis, and he tackles such vital issues as Iraqi elections, the prospect of successful democratization—and the way home.

International Law and Sustainable Development

Principles and Practice

EDITED BY NICO SCHRIJVER AND FRIEDL WEISS

The chapters assembled in this volume illustrate various aspects of efforts of policy makers, and regional and national interest groups to invoke and rely upon international law for the realisation of the objective of sustainable development. They deal in particular with recent examples of the practice of states and of relevant international organisations, especially in such areas as international trade, foreign investment regulation, human rights and natural resources and waste management. Furthermore, some chapters are dedicated to a review of relevant practice at a regional and national level.

The September 11 Terrorist Attacks and the Invasion of Iraq in Contemporary International Law

Opinions on the Emerging New World Order System

EDWARD MCWHINNEY

The problems for contemporary international law and the UN Charter based World Order system posed by the conflicts within the Security Council and the assorted legal claims advanced, such as a revived doctrine of Humanitarian Intervention; régime change as a justification for intervention; Preemptive military strikes as an exercise in Self-defence; and Multilateralism versus Unilateralism in the exercise of the Peace and Security powers under the UN Charter, are canvassed in this collection of legal opinions.

This work studies the economic foundations of the international covenant on economic, social and cultural rights. It is argued that legal principles alone cannot fully actualise this instrument: only sustained inter-disciplinary elaboration of its guarantees can give this instrument full effect.

Military Training and Children in Armed Conflict

Law, Policy and Practice

JENNY KUPER

This book aims to address three main questions: what are the obligations of officers of national armed forces in relation to children, either civilians or combatants, whom they or those under their command may encounter while participating in situations of armed conflict? How realistic and achievable are these obligations? How can compliance with them be encouraged, monitored, and/or enforced?
