

Allies, Adversaries, and International Trade

▶ Joanne Gowa

During the Cold War, international trade closely paralleled the division of the world into two rival political-military blocs. In this book, Joanne Gowa examines the logic behind this linkage between alliances and trade and asks whether it applies not only after but also before World War II.

"... an outstanding and original book. . . . This work will have a major impact on the study of international political economy."

—David A. Lake, UC-San Diego

Power, Trade, and War

▶ Edward D. Mansfield

In this book, which presents the first attempt to model the relationships among the distribution of power, international trade, and war, Edward Mansfield dispels the widespread belief that a monotonic relationship exists between the distribution of power and patterns of both war and trade.

"This book is a sorely needed comprehensive empirical study of power, trade, and war. While other studies touch on aspects of this subject, none comes close to the scope of this work."—Lisa Martin, Harvard University

Who Adjusts?

Domestic Sources of Foreign Economic Policy during the Interwar Years

▶ Beth A. Simmons

Who Adjusts presents a fresh view of why governments decided to abide by or defect from the gold standard during the 1920s and 1930s. Beth Simmons analyzes the influence of domestic politics on national responses to the international economy. In so doing, she powerfully confirms that different political regimes choose different economic adjustment strategies.

Mercenaries, Pirates, and Sovereigns

State-Building and Extraterritorial Violence in Early Modern Europe

▶ Janice E. Thomson

The contemporary organization of global violence is neither timeless nor natural, argues Janice Thomson. It is distinctively modern. In this book she examines how the present arrangement of the world into violence-monopolizing sovereign states evolved over the six preceding centuries.

"... a forceful contribution to a crucial inquiry."
