

MODERN AMERICAN HISTORY

Volume 2, Issue 3, November 2019

---

Articles

“Every Citizen a Sentinel! Every Home a Sentry Box!” The Sentinels of the Republic and the Gendered Origins of Free-Market Conservatism

Julia Bowes

Why conservatives campaigned fiercely against the adoption of the federal Child Labor Amendment in the 1920s and 1930s 269

“The Paradise of the Latrine”: American Toilet-Building and the Continuities of Colonial and Postcolonial Development

Simon Toner

Looking beyond the rhetoric of modernization to on-the-ground health initiatives in wartime Vietnam 299

Regulating Off-Road: The California Desert and Collaborative Environmentalism

Keith Makoto Woodhouse

How federal agencies and interest groups worked together more cooperatively in the 1970s and 1980s than familiar narratives of environmental litigation suggest 321

Below the Fold

The Soapbox

The Conundrum of American Power in the Age of World War I

Katherine C. Epstein

Reports of the rise of the United States to a lead role on the global stage in the early twentieth century have been greatly exaggerated 345

Children Are Hiding in Plain Sight in the History of U.S. Foreign Relations

Brian Rouleau

What would the nation’s history look like if we took this silent majority seriously? 367

Take Three: The Ballot

One modern American right. Three different perspectives

A Crack in the Edifice of White Supremacy

Liette Gidlow

389

Vote Aquí
Rosina Lozano 393

The Unintended Consequences of Eighteen-Year-Old Voting
Jenny Diamond Cheng 397

Into the Stacks

Reflections on the Challenges of Writing a (Pre-)History of the “Polarized” Present
Thomas Zimmer
As empirical reality and as analytical concept, the concept of polarization poses problems for historians 403