

"In connection with this subject, I would respectfully suggest that a small appropriation be made by your Honourable Board, to enable some of these recovered patients, who are friendless and without means, to once more pursue their usual avocations, and again face the world. For instance, a poor servant-girl is sent to the Asylum wearing on her person all her worldly effects; she is a case of acute mania, and has already torn or destroyed, or so damaged her clothing that it is no longer fit to be worn. After a lapse of time she recovers, is restored to reason, and is told that she can leave the Asylum. 'I have no clothes to wear, no means to procure a night's lodging or the necessary daily food, until I can obtain a situation,' is her reply. She has no friends. What is to be done in such a case? To send her to the Alms-house is repugnant to her feelings; to send her to the city penniless is to expose her to temptation. The matron does what she best can as far as supplying her with clothing and making her look as decent as possible under the circumstances, and she leaves the Asylum to again battle with the world. A dollar or two given at this period might be the means of saving her. It is for this class that I make the appeal, and candidly and honestly consider that, in most instances at least, if not in all, this fund would not be misapplied. Heretofore, whatever money has been furnished to these patients has been supplied by myself or the matron, who preferred providing the necessary temporary means of sustenance rather than see them exposed to want."

* We purpose to give some pages of this Bibliography, according as our space permits, in future numbers of the Journal. We had intended to make the Index commence with January, 1879, but have been induced to include a considerable number in the first list, which bear the date of 1878. We must express our acknowledgments to the "Index Medicus," compiled by Billings and Fletcher, New York, a work ranging over the whole area of Anatomy, Surgery, Medicine, Dentistry, Hygiene, and Veterinary Medicine. If it is even a task of some labour to extract such publications as bear on Psychological Medicine, and add others from other sources, it is not difficult to form some idea of the colossal labour which the above-mentioned medical men have undertaken. We have found it difficult to know where to draw the line, but have included some articles on Epilepsy, Hysteria, Catalepsy, Dipsomania, &c. We began by including works on the physiology and pathology of the nervous system, but were obliged to relinquish so extensive a range of medical literature, important as many of the works are which we have excluded from our catalogue. But, wherever we draw the line of demarcation, it must be arbitrary, because no such division exists in nature.—D. H. T.
