Association Distributes Annual Awards

Twenty-one members of the political science community were recognized for their scholarly activity and public service at the 1998 Awards Ceremony, held in conjunction with the Annual Meeting in Boston. Hosted by 1998 Program Chair Virginia Sapiro of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, the major ple-

Thomas Patterson [R], Harvard University, chair of the E.E. Schattschneider Award Committee, with 1998 recipient Frances Lee of Case Western Reserve University. The award was presented to Lee for her dissertation, "The Enduring Consequences of the Great Compromise: Senate Apportionment and Congressional Policymaking."

nary of the meeting drew nearly 500 attendees and, following the ceremony, featured APSA President M. Kent Jennings' Presidential Address. The Association was especially pleased to honor Representative Lee Hamilton (D-IN) with the 1998 Hubert H. Humphrey Award, recognizing his distinguished career in the House of Representatives. Hamilton, who has represented the 9th District of Indiana since 1964, will leave the House following conclusion of the 105th session of Congress to direct the Woodrow Wilson Center for International Scholars. A complete version of the citation honoring Hamilton can be found in the Gazette section of this issue.

Three others also received awards recognizing major contributions to the profession and our understanding and practice of politics. In only its second presentation, the Ithiel De Sola Pool Award was given to W. Lance Bennett of the University of Washington. Pool Committee Chair Marion Just noted in her citation that, like the late Pool, Bennett "has been a fearless scholar, unafraid of tackling tough subjects or cherished icons." As part of the award, Bennett was named the Ithiel de Sola Pool Distinguished Lecturer and delivered his address to a capacity crowd during the meeting.

Eminent scholar Louis C. Gawthrop of the University of Baltimore was presented the John Gaus Award by Committee Chair Lois Recascino Wise. The Gaus prize honors a lifetime of exemplary scholarship in the joint tradition of political science and public administration. In her citation Wise noted that "Gawthrop's professional career is marked by an exemplary contribution of intellectually challenging scholarship in the finest tradition of political science and public administration." With the award, Gawthrop served as the 13th John Gaus Distinguished Lecturer, delivering his lecture on the Friday afternoon of the meeting. Both the Pool and Gaus lectures may be found at the front of this issue of PS.

In its annual recognition of exceptional journalism, the Association named Richard Reeves winner of the 1998 Carey McWilliams Award.

Lee Ann Banaszak [R], chair of the Victoria Schuck Award Committee, presents the 1998 prize to Uma Narayan of Vassar College for Dislocating Cultures: Identities Traditions, and Third World Feminism.

Currently on the faculty of the School of Communication at the University of Southern California, Reeves is a former chief political correspondent for The New York Times, and a former editor of both New York magazine and Esquire. The McWilliams Award is given annually to recognize a major journalistic contribution to our understanding of politics.

Eight dissertation prizes were awarded to nine young scholars who had completed their doctoral studies during the 1996 or 1997 academic years. Political science departments at Harvard University, University of Chicago, and the University of California, Berkeley each produced two winning dissertations. Indiana University, Ohio State University, and Vanderbilt University each nominated one winner.

Cowinners were named for the Gabriel A. Almond Award, which is presented for the best dissertation in comparative politics. Beatriz Magaloni, currently at Harvard University, was named cowinner for "The Dynamics of Dominant Party Decline: The Mexican Transition to Multipartyism." John H. Aldrich of Duke University and Robert H. Bates of Harvard University served as co-chairs of her dissertation committee. James Mahoney, currently at Brown University, joined Magaloni on stage as he was recognized for "Radical, Reformist, and Aborted Liberalism:

Origins of Nationalist Regimes in Central America." David Collier and Ruth Berins Collier of the University of California, Berkeley served as dissertation committee co-chairs.

The William Anderson Award was presented to Kirk Emerson of the University of Arizona in recognition of his dissertation, "The Emergence of State Property Rights Legislation: A Comparative State Policy Analysis." The Anderson Award is given annually for the best dissertation in the field of state and local politics, federalism or intergovernmental relations. Charles Wise and Rosemary O'Leary of Indiana University served as dissertation committee co-chairs. Christopher J. Zorn of Emory University was winner of the Edward S. Corwin Award for the best dissertation in the field of public law. His work, "U.S. Government Litigation Strategies in the Federal Appellate Courts," was overseen by Gregory A. Caldeira of Ohio State University. The Helen Dwight Reid Award, presented annually for the best dissertation in the field of international relations, law, and politics, was given to Michael J. Hiscox of Harvard University for "The Trade War at Home: Factory, Mobility, International Trade, and Political Coalitions in Democracies." James A. Alt of Harvard University served as dissertation committee chair.

Recognizing "The Enduring Consequences of the Great Compromise: Senate Apportionment and Congressional Policymaking," the E.E. Schattschneider Award Committee named Frances E. Lee winner of the 1998 Schattschneider Prize. Lee is now on faculty at Case Western Reserve. Bruce I. Oppenheimer of Vanderbilt University served as dissertation committee chair.

Sung Ho Kim, University of Chicago, receives the 1998 Leo Strauss Award from Committee Chair Mary Dietz of the University of Minnesota. Lee was presented the award, given annually for the best dissertation in the field of political theory, for "Of 'Sect Man': Modern Self and Civil Society in Max Weber's Political Thought."

Citing the “discerning and original interpretive reconstruction” of Max Weber’s political thought, the 1998 Leo Strauss Award Committee named “Of ‘Sect Man’: The Modern Self and Civil Society in Max Weber’s Political Thought” by Sung Ho Kim winner of the Strauss Prize. Kim’s dissertation was overseen by Susanne Hoerber Rudolph of the University of Chicago. Kim now serves on the faculty of the department of geography at the University of Chicago. Craig W. Thomas, currently at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, was presented the Leonard D. White Award for “Bureaucratic Landscapes: Inter-agency Cooperation and the Preservation of Biodiversity.” Todd La Porte, University of California, Berkeley, served as chair of Thomas’ dissertation committee. The White Award is given annually for the best dissertation in the field of public administration.

National awards were also given for outstanding publications. The Pi Sigma Alpha/Franklin L. Burdette Award for the best paper presented at the 1997 Annual Meeting went to Karen Orren, University of California, Los Angeles, for her paper “Machine Constitutionalism: The Court, the Republican Party, and the Eleventh Amendment in the Gilded Age.” The Heinz Eulau Award was shared by two sets of coauthors. The Eulau prize is given annually for the best article published in the American Political Science Review during the previous year. Piotr Swistak, University of Maryland and Jonathan Bendor, Stanford University, won for “The Evolutionary Stability of Cooperation”; and Christopher Anderson, SUNY-Binghamton and Christine Guillory, won for “Political Institutions and Satisfaction with Democracy.”

The Ralph Bunche Award, presented for the best scholarly work in political science published in 1997 which explores the phenomenon of ethnic and cultural pluralism, was given to Rogers M. Smith of Yale University for Civic Ideals: Conflicting Visions of Citizenship in U.S. History (Yale University Press). Paul M.

Poster sessions are now an established part of the programs. Women were 24.5% of the poster presenters in 1998 (135 of 547).

As I've noted previously, where women head divisions or panels, there is a greater likelihood of other women being selected for program contributions. This year we had a female chairing the Program Committee. In 1998, 17 of the 47 division persons were women (36.2%) (cf. 1995: 38.8%; 1996: 30.06%; 1997: 37.3%). The divisions they headed had women as 31.8% (68 of 214) of the chairpersons, 38.8% (414 of 1067) of the papergivers, and 36.7% (91 of 248) of the discussants (cf. 1995: 30.7%, 34.2%, 31.0%; 1996: 26.1%, 35.1%, 29.8%; 1997: 35.4%, 32.1%, 31.4%).

The convention divisions led by women had 59.1% of the convention's female panel chairs, 51.0% of the papergivers, and 49.7% of its discussants (cf. 1995: 44.0%, 48.0%, 42.0%; 1996: 40.4%, 50.7%; 1997: 60.1%, 54.0%, 53.4%). Women-chaired panels had 41.1% female paper givers and 49.4% female discussants (cf. 1995: 41.0, 42.5%; 1996: 38.7%, 33.9%; 1997: 37.7%, 43.0%). These constituted 33.8% of the women giving papers at the 1998 convention and 43.7% of the women serving as discussants (Cf. 1995: 40.8%, 43.3%; 1996: 30.9%, 30.3%; 1997: 38.0%, 40.4%).

The divisions with the weakest female representation in 1998 were those on Formal Political Theory, Politics and History, Political Methodology, Comparative Politics, International Security, International Security and Arms Control, Domestic Sources of Foreign Policy, Conflict Processes, Urban Politics, Political Organizations and Parties, and Elections and Voting Behavior.

Among the predominantly female panels were those on Privacy and Democracy, "Private" Values and "Public" Life, Europeanization and Domestic Change II, Substitutability in Foreign Policy Women as Legislators: Impact and Influence, New Theory and New Methods for Policy Implementation: The View from the Street, The States and "Morality" Politics, Mobilizing Women's Communities I: The Americas, Mobilizing Women's Communities II: Africa and the Middle East, Gender and Political Communications I and II, Gender, Elections and Public Opinion I: Comparative, Feminism and Political Community Women in the Global Community: The European Union and NAFTA Gender, Public Policy and the State IV: Comparative Abortion Policy, Mobilizing Women's Communities III: Sisters Doin' It For Themselves, and Gender and Transformational Politics.

Sniderman, Stanford University, and Edward G. Carmines, Indiana University shared the 1998 Gladys M. Kammerer Award for their work Reaching Beyond Race (Harvard University Press). The Kammerer Award is presented for the best political science publication in the field of U.S. national policy.

The Victoria Schuck Award, for the best book published in the previous year on women and politics, went to Uma Narayan, Vassar College, for Dislocating Cultures: Identities, Traditions, and Third World Feminism (Routledge). University of California, San Diego faculty member Gary W. Cox won the Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award for his book Making Votes Count: Strategic Coordination in the World's Electoral Systems (Cambridge University Press). Cox's book was also named both Best Book in Political Economy and Best Book in Comparative Politics by those respective Organized Sections later in the week (see article on Organized Sections prizes in this issue of PS).

Full citations for all awards appear in "The Gazette" in this issue of PS. For information on 1999 APSA Awards visit the APSA web site (www.apsanet.org/Awards/).

Graduate Students Attend Meeting with APSA Assistance

In a continuing effort to assist graduate students wishing to participate in the Annual Meeting, the Association awarded 27 grants through the Advanced Graduate Student Travel Grant Program. Funded by APSA, winners were selected from a pool of over 100 applicants. All those who applied were to present a paper or poster as part of the Annual Meeting Program.

Since the grants were first awarded in 1994, over 100 doctoral students from the United States have been funded. The number of applications submitted for consideration has risen over 40%. At the 1998 Annual Meeting in Boston, graduate students delivered papers on approximately 675 panels and roundtables and were well represented among the 350 scholars presenting posters.
