Reaction to Colonialism

A prelude to the politics of independence in Northern Zambia 1893-1939

H. S. MEEBELO

The author maintains that the African independence movement can no longer be regarded as a phenomenon which arose during or after World War II, as it was essentially the end product of political evolution which had taken place before the war.

Published for the Institute for Social Research, University of Zambia.

Cloth £2.40; paper £1.20 net

Strategy and Transaction in an African Factory

African workers and Indian management in urban Zambia

B. KAPFERER

Presents an analysis of the patterns of social behaviour among a group of African workers in a factory set in the changing social and political context of post-independent Zambia. The major emphasis of the book is to apply the social exchange theory, in particular propositions derived from it, in explaining changing patterns of behaviour in the factory.

MUSLIM BROTHERHOODS AND POLITICS IN SENEGAL

The influence of traditional and religious groups on modern politics is a significant factor in the development of many countries. Focusing on the West African country of Senegal, Mrs. Behrman investigates the political roles of Muslim religious organizations there. She analyzes the historical conditions under which Muslim brotherhoods emerged as a political force and examines their contemporary function in Senegalese politics. $7.25

SOVIET POLICY IN WEST AFRICA

In this first in-depth study of Soviet relations with Black Africa, Mr. Legvold focuses on six West African countries that differ widely in their approach to foreign aid and domestic matters - Guinea, Ghana, Mali, Ivory Coast, Senegal, and Nigeria. He explores the intricacies of Soviet policy in Africa and follows closely its course over the ten years after the majority of that continent's colonies achieved independence. $13.00

IBO POLITICS

The Role of Ethnic Unions in Eastern Nigeria

The first social scientist concerned with Africa to obtain both primary records of ethnic unions and interviews from their leaders and prominent members, Mrs. Smock demonstrates that ethnicity is not a legacy of the precolonial past so much as a response to forces of change induced by colonial rule. She concludes that ethnic unions are a sign of modernization, not backwardness. $10.00

Oxford History of South Africa

Volume II, South Africa 1870–1967

Edited by MONICA WILSON and LEONARD THOMPSON

Volume II of a two-volume history of South Africa describes the economic growth that has taken place in South Africa during the century that began with the discovery of diamonds in Griqualand West; examines the history of the three great social complexes of modern South Africa; deals with the impact and interaction of the major political forces that have operated in and on South African society during the century, and presents an account of the changing relationships between South Africa and the outside world. 13 text-figures 6 maps £5

Liberalism in South Africa 1948–1963

JANET ROBERTSON

Since the Second World War a minority of South Africans – white as well as black – has actively sought to extend equal rights to non-whites within the parliamentary system. This book describes what happened to liberals working within such groups as the African National Congress, the United Party, the Liberal Party, and the Progressive Party, and tells the story of the dismantling of the liberal state and the failure of the liberal ideal in South Africa. £2.25

POWER AND DIPLOMACY IN NORTHERN NIGERIA 1804-1906

The Sokoto Caliphate and its Enemies

R A Adeleye

The rise and fall of the Sokoto Caliphate, the largest of the nineteenth century states in West Africa, had far-reaching consequences – political, religious and cultural – for the whole of Nigeria. This study, the most comprehensive yet attempted, uses French, Hausa, Arabic and English sources to unfold and analyse the internal and external influence behind the establishment of the Caliphate in the early nineteenth century, its uneasy relations with its neighbours and its ultimate conflict with and conquest by the British colonialists.

S A Akintoye

In the history of most African peoples, the nineteenth century was an era of revolutions. Few were more profound in their effect than the revolution which, through a series of wars between 1820 and 1893, transformed the face of Yorubaland; the complexities of the Yoruba political structure, demography and pattern of local loyalties are rooted in this upheaval. This book marks the first attempt to place in the historical perspective of the Yoruba, the history of the eastern communities about which little or nothing has so far been written.

THE NIGERIAN ARMY

1956-1966

N. J. Miners

In January 1956 only fifteen of the 250 officers in the Nigerian Army were Nigerian, and the soldiers were generally despised by nationalists as the underpaid and poorly equipped agents of the colonialists. Ten years later, on the eve of the first military coup, the army had been modernized and expanded, had served with distinction in the Congo, and all its officers were Nigerian. N. J. Miners traces the stages of this transformation and describes the increasing tension and political manoeuvring which exploded into the military coups of 1966.

The Politics of Trade Negotiations between Africa and the European Economic Community

The Weak Confront the Strong

I. WILLIAM ZARTMAN

How do the weak negotiate with the strong and win some benefits in spite of their lack of power? Discussing negotiations between the EEC and African states in the 1960's, Professor Zartman examines the political dynamics of the process, in theory and in practice.

Crisis and Beyond

John Oyinbo

with an introduction by
John P. Mackintosh, M.P.

The author's perspective of events in Nigeria before, during and after the civil war is that of an expatriate whose involvement with the country began in childhood. His book begins on 1 October 1960, when Nigerians celebrated independence, and traces the change from their initial delight to the disillusionment of subsequent years, when discontent and suspicion culminated in the breakdown of a political machine which could not cope with the pressures put on it. In January 1966 a new military government announced it had taken control after the attempted revolt by certain army officers. The author lived with Nigerians through the events which followed - counter coups, massacres, Gowon's creation of states, Ojukwu's announcement of secession, the final tragedy of civil war - and his experiences enable him to offer this analysis, which he concludes with an assessment of the country's prospects for achieving a new and stronger national unity.

WORLD DEVELOPMENT HANDBOOK

Juliet Clifford and Gavin Osmond

Many of the people who would like to become involved in improving the conditions of those living in poverty are deterred by the complexity of the issues in the subject of aid for overseas development. World Development Handbook is a layman's introduction to economic development, and deals mainly with the effects that rich countries' policies have upon the economies of poor countries. The book is in four main parts: I. The problem of poverty; II. Development; III. The economic relationship between rich and poor countries; IV. International aid. The work naturally contains a wealth of statistical information, but principally this is a book about ideas and policies concerning aid for developing countries.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
