

Databases for Specialized Audiences: An Exploration of Online Access to the Nontextual Features of Greek New Testament Manuscripts – ADDENDUM

Marina Toumpouri

DOI: 10.1017/aap.2018.54, Published by Cambridge University Press, 4 March 2019

The author of this digital review (Toumpouri 2019) would like to add a clarification to the availability of the databases of the Leimonos Monastery on the island of Lesbos (Moni Leimonos manuscripts' database, <http://web.pvaigaiou.gov.gr/leimonos/library/index.php>) and the Monastery of Saint Neophytos (Enkleistra) in Cyprus (Saint Neophytos manuscripts' database, <https://apsida.cut.ac.cy/items/browse?collection=39>).

When this review was prepared in fall 2018, the databases of the Monasteries of Saint Neophytos and of Leimonos were fully operable. During database updates, web access to the latter database may be restricted, but it is expected that the original web access will be restored when completed. In the meantime, users accessing the database through the servers of the Greek government (available in public institutions such as university libraries or the Ministry of Culture) will have full access to the database.

The author and publisher apologize for any confusion caused by the phrasing in the original digital review.

REFERENCE CITED

Toumpouri, Marina

2019 Databases for Specialized Audiences: An Exploration of Online Access to the Nontextual Features of Greek New Testament Manuscripts. Advances in Archaeological Practice 7:97–105.