What would a true intercultural poetics be? This work proposes various ways to "study something other than what are, all things considered, the short and simple annals of one cultural parish at one historic moment."

The first developed account of theories of literature from an intercultural standpoint, the book shows that an "originate" or "foundational" poetics develops in cultures with explicit poetics when critics define the nature and conditions of literature in terms of the then most esteemed genre—drama, lyric, or narrative. Earl Miner demonstrates that these definitions, and inferences from them, constitute useful bases for comparative poetics.

New in paperback

With a new preface by Joseph M. Kitagawa

This volume presents the only English translation of the prayers of Japan's indigenous religious tradition, Shintō. These prayers, norito, are works of religious literature that are basic to an understanding of Japanese religious history.

Composed in the stately ritual language of the ancient Japanese and presented as a "performing text," these prayers are now available in a definitive paperback edition.
