

MODERN AMERICAN HISTORY

Volume 5, Issue 2, July 2022

Articles

Birth Registration and the Administration of White Supremacy

Susan J. Pearson

How identity documentation impacted the allotment of Indigenous lands and the enforcement of racial segregation between Reconstruction and World War II 117

“The World’s Greatest Hypocrites”: White Men and Diplomatic Reporting in the Early Cold War

Kathryn J. McGarr

A discovery of the contrast between anti-communist public narratives and off-the-record acknowledgments of economic motives 143

An Ally and an Intermediary: Bella Abzug, Gay Americans, and the Equality Act

David G. Ferrara

An analysis of the congresswoman’s central role in the introduction of the first federal gay rights legislation 163

“Saints” or “Scabs”: Contesting Feminized Labors, Social Needs, and the Welfare State in the Volunteering Wars of the 1970s

Katherine Turk

When debates about the value of caring work revealed the conflict between movements advancing broad rights claims and the New Right’s assault on the “undeserving” 187

Below the Fold

Q&A

The Perils of Public Engagement

Nicole Hemmer, Ibram X. Kendi, Kevin M. Kruse, Erika Lee and Manisha Sinha

Thoughts and advice about the risks and rewards of public-facing work 209

The Soapbox

Dodgers, Delinquents, and What Jackie Robinson Can Teach Us about the Intersection of Sports and the Carceral State

Carl Suddler

Reflections on the notion that organized athletics occupy time and prevent crime 221