The Earliest Modern Government Schools in China

By KNIGHT BIGGERSTAFF, Cornell University

THIS survey of the steps taken by the Chinese government between 1861 and 1894 to introduce modern schools describes the character and achievements of the schools established in that period and studies in detail three of them: the T'ung-wen Kuan, the Kiangnan Arsenal, and the Foochow Navy Yard School. The author examines and interprets the resistance to educational change that prevailed at the time, and with his comprehensive work, fills another gap in our knowledge and understanding of the making of modern China. 287 pages, $5.00

An Indonesian-English Dictionary

Edited by JOHN M. ECHOLS, Cornell University, and HASSAN SHADILY

THE first such comprehensive dictionary to be published in the United States since the unification of the Indonesian republic, this is a faithful record of words and expressions from contemporary Indonesian writing of all sorts, and includes extensive illustrative examples in sentences and phrases. 400 pages, $7.50

Mongkut, the King of Siam

By ABBOT LOW MOFFAT, *Former Chief,
Division of Southeast Asian Affairs, U. S. Department of State*

MANY of the letters and documents quoted in this book appear in English for the first time, providing both historian and general reader with new source materials on Siamese history as well as on the great king himself. In this engaging portrait, Mongkut emerges as even more remarkable than the caricature of him presented in recent popular accounts. 271 pages, frontis., illus., $3.75

BRITISH ATTITUDES TOWARDS INDIA

1784-1858

By GEORGE D. BEARCE. This analysis examines an almost completely neglected area of Anglo-Indian historiography—the intellectual basis and ideological atmosphere which underlay British rule in India. Appraising the attitudes of all kinds of Englishmen, Professor Bearce shows how, from Burke's conservatism, the viewpoint of liberal reformers ultimately became the predominant British feeling. $5.60
