

CONTRIBUTORS

JONATHAN BARTHO is a PhD candidate at University College London studying contemporary US political history. His thesis explores the political interaction between President Ronald Reagan and the South, focusing on domestic policy areas. In particular, it considers the impact of this relationship on the development of the modern Republican Party and the landscape of US politics toward the end of the twentieth century.

jonathan.bartho.13@ucl.ac.uk

BRYANT ETHERIDGE teaches in the Political Science Department at Bridgewater State University and researches the politics of human capital in midcentury.

bletheridge1@gmail.com

YONGWOO JEUNG is a PhD candidate in the Department of Political Science at the University of Oregon. His dissertation discusses US labor market policies in the 1960s. He is also interested in American political development, American political economy, and race.

jeung@uoregon.edu

YOUN KI received her PhD from the University of Chicago. She is an assistant professor in the Department of Political Science at Miami University. Her research interests include financialization, business and politics, and the United States in the 1970s.

kiy@miamioh.edu

JOSH MOUND received his PhD in History and Sociology from the University of Michigan in December 2015. He is currently a postdoctoral fellow in the College of Arts & Sciences at the University of Virginia.

mound@virginia.edu