

Lunacy, and these were re-echoed by the leaders of the Equity Bar. But no stronger manifestation of the esteem in which he was held could be given than the imposing funeral procession which followed his remains to their last resting-place in the cemetery which is attached to the institution where he had spent his best days, and which he had himself selected some time ago for his grave. As the coffin was borne to his grave by four senior attendants of the different hospitals for the insane, a large number of the attendants followed, and he was laid to rest in the presence of a very large gathering of the medical profession, the judges of the Supreme Court, members of Parliament, and representatives of many of the institutions with which he had been connected.

The memory of Norton Manning will ever remain green in the minds of those whose privilege it was to know him as a friend and adviser, and the profession in New South Wales mourns to-day the loss of one of its brightest ornaments.

A memorial is being raised by his Australian friends.
