

ADDENDUM

Revisiting the Early Modern Philosophical Canon—ADDENDUM

LISA SHAPIRO

doi: 10.1017/apa.2016.27, Published by Cambridge University Press, 28 October 2016.

Keywords: early modern philosophy, women philosophers, philosophical canon, philosophy of mind, education; addendum

In the above mentioned article on page 376, in the third paragraph, after the sentence ‘These prejudices are not simply the inevitable consequence of our imperfect knowledge, but rather are akin to, in contemporary terms, implicit biases.’, the author would like to add the following footnote: Amy Schmitter, in her ‘Cartesian Prejudice and Critique of Gender in Poulain de la Barre,’ presented at the Pacific APA in March 2016, helpfully aligns Poullain’s notion of prejudice with implicit bias. The responsibility of all errors and omissions rests with the author.

We sincerely regret this omission from the original text and any problems that have resulted for the authors and readers.

Reference

Shapiro, L. (2016). Revisiting the Early Modern Philosophical Canon. Journal of the American Philosophical Association, 2(3), 365–383. doi:10.1017/apa.2016.27