

See JERUSALEM

In 1995, Jerusalem is the site for the biannual Congress of the World Association for Disaster and Emergency Medicine (WADEM). Every two years WADEM brings together the leading exponents of emergency medicine, disaster management, international relief, and related professions to discuss issues of mutual concern.

This is a fine opportunity for all persons, medical or non-medical, to participate in an international forum that provides an interdisciplinary approach to disaster planning and management, and facilitates exchanges between members of rescue, security, community, and medical services.

It also is an opportunity for exploration and wonder. Ask about pre- and post-conference tours!

"In the ghetto of the orthodox Jews I felt like an extra in a medieval film, between the black-clad men with their ringlets on their temples, the children in their old-fashioned clothing, which in the summer heat bared only their head and hands to the air. My friend . . . took me up the Mount of Olives because she wanted to show me the truly golden light of the evening over the city so that I would understand why here everyone felt nearer to their god than anywhere else."

Do you know how to treat a scuba diving accident? Does your staff?

Chances are good that you've heard of the bends, but do you really know how to treat them?

Would you be confident knowing your EMS was responding to the scene of a scuba diving accident?

Divers Alert Network is an international nonprofit member-supported diving safety organization based at Duke University Medical Center.

DAN offers specialized information and training in diving medicine for divers and healthcare professionals. DAN helps EMS and physicians evaluate and treat diving-related injuries — situations your EMS may face.

- DAN is supported by an international network of hyperbaric facilities and diving specialists.
- Since 1980, DAN has assisted over 60,000 divers who needed help.
- It is estimated there are over three million active scuba divers in the United States.
- Scuba diving takes place in every state — wherever there's water, you're sure to find scuba divers.
