

THE CONTRIBUTORS

---

Peter Gries is the Harold J. and Ruth Newman Chair in US-China Issues and director of the Institute for US-China Issues at the University of Oklahoma. He is the author of China's New Nationalism (2004) and coeditor of Chinese Politics (2010) and State and Society in 21st-Century China (2004). He has also written numerous academic journal articles and book chapters. His work focuses on the political psychology of US-China relations.

Allen Hicken is associate professor of political science at the University of Michigan and can be contacted at ahicken@umich.edu. He studies political parties, institutions, political economy, and policymaking in developing countries, with a focus on Southeast Asia. He is the author of a book on parties and elections in Thailand and the Philippines, Building Party Systems in Developing Democracies (2008), and editor of Politics of Modern Southeast Asia: Critical Issues in Modern Politics (2010). His articles have appeared in American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Comparative Political Studies, Journal of East Asian Studies, Asian Survey, and Electoral Studies.

Raymond Hicks is the statistical programmer at the Niehaus Center for Globalization and Governance, Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University. His main research area is international political economy, with a specialization in monetary and trade politics. His current research projects focus on the WTO and international trade, foreign aid and development, and the politics of trade agreements.

Llewelyn Hughes is assistant professor of political science and international affairs at George Washington University. He received his PhD in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His research focuses on the political economy of energy and climate change. Supporting data are available from his website at <http://home.gwu.edu/~lhughes/Home.html>.

Soo Yeon Kim is associate professor of political science at the National University of Singapore. She is the author of Power and the Governance of Global Trade: From the GATT to the WTO (2010). Her research specialization is the politics of trade, and her current research program includes projects on institution building and the politics of trade agreements in post–Cold War Asia, compliance in WTO disputes, and rising powers in the global economy.

Dean Lacy is professor of government and director of the program in Politics and Law, Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire. His work on elections, public opinion, and political methodology includes “Testing Proximity Versus Directional Voting Using Experiments,” with Philip Paolino (Electoral Studies, 2010); “A Theory of Economic Sanctions and Issue Linkage,” with Emerson Niou (Journal of Politics, 2004); and “A Theory of Nonseparable Preferences in Survey Responses” (American Journal of Political Science, 2001).

Emerson M. S. Niou is professor of political science and director of the program in Asian Security Studies, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina. He is coauthor of The Balance of Power (1989). His recent publications include “A Theory of Economic Sanctions and Issue Linkage,” with Dean Lacy (Journal of Politics, 2004); “External Threat and Collective Action,” with Guofu Tan (Economic Inquiry, 2005); and “Strategic Voting in Plurality Elections,” with Daniel Kselman (Political Analysis, 2010).

Joel Sawat Selway is assistant professor at Brigham Young University and can be contacted at joel\_selway@byu.edu. He received his PhD in political science from the University of Michigan, during which time he spent a year in Thailand as a Fulbright scholar. He speaks Thai and Laotian and has written on several Southeast Asian countries, including Thailand, Laos, Burma, and Indonesia. His research focuses on political institutions, ethnicity and nationalism, and development, and his work has appeared in World Politics, British Journal of Political Science, Political Analysis, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and Comparative Political Studies.