another, a multimedia approach to reaching students; in yet another, the creator of a simulation or an educational data set might be recognized; and in yet another, the author of a text or monograph that changes the way a subject is taught. The only limits on what will be recognized are the imagination and creativity of those teaching political science.

The recipients of the award will be chosen by a five-person committee, chaired on behalf of Rowman & Littlefield by L. Sandy Maisel, the William R. Kenan, Jr., Professor and Chair of the Department of Government at Colby College. Additional committee members will include the outgoing president of APSA or his/her designee, the APSA Director of Education and Professional Development, and two members selected by the outgoing APSA Program Chair(s).

Nominations for the award, together with supporting documentation, should be sent to L. Sandy Maisel, Department of Government, Colby College, Waterville, ME 04901. The nomination deadline is February 15, 1997.

Minority ID Project Contributors

The American Political Science Association wants to express its deep appreciation for the departmental and individual contributors to APSA's Minority Identification Project.

The Minority Identification Project is one of APSA's major efforts on recruiting minority students to the discipline of Political Science.

It is a collaboration of undergraduate programs and graduate schools in political science: faculty in university and college undergraduate programs talk with minority students about professional careers in political science and send to APSA the names of promising minority candidates for graduate study; participating graduate institutions actively recruit students identified by the Project and make special efforts to provide financial aid to those admitted to their programs.

The Department of Political Science of the following universities (in alphabetic order) have made financial contributions to the Project: Duke University, Emory University, Indiana University, Miami University, Ohio State University, Princeton University, Rutgers University, Stanford University, Syracuse University, University of California-Berkeley, University of California-Los Angeles, University of California-San Diego, University of Chicago, University of Colorado-Boulder, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, University of Massachusetts-Amherst, University of Minnesota, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, University of Pennsylvania, University of Rochester, University of Texas at Austin, University of Wisconsin-Madison, Washington University, and Yale University.

The following individuals have also contributed to the Minority Identification Project:

Henry Brady, University of California-Berkeley; Shelley Burt, Yale University; William Corlett, Bates

College; Cynthia Enloe, Clark University; Charles A. Johnson, Texas A & M University; William R. Keech, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill; and David Plotke, New School for Social Research.

Norm Ornstein Greeted Fellows, Guests at Congressional Fellowship Program Reception

Norman Ornstein, Chairman of the Congressional Fellowship Program's Advisory Committee, addressed CFP alumni and other guests at a reception held at the U.S. Capitol on July 16. Funded by MCI Communications Corporation, the reception was held to bid farewell to the 1995–96 Fellows.

Among those present were several members of Congress including Senators Dick Lugar and Chuck Robb, and Representatives Robert Ehrlich, Nancy Johnson, Fred Upton and J.C. Watts, Jr. Other friends of the program in attendance included Neil Skene, Editor, Publisher, and President of Congressional Quarterly Inc., and former Speaker Tom Foley, who served for several years on the program's Advisory Committee. Numerous congressional staff members were also in attendance.

Congressional Fellowship Program receptions, held twice a year, provide an opportunity for current and former Fellows and friends of the program to renew acquaintances, keep up with the latest news about Congress, and enjoy the friendship of colleagues.

Forty-Fourth Class of Congressional Fellows Begins 1996–97 Program

Winners of the 1996–97 Congressional Fellowship Program competition for political scientists, journalists and federal employees were announced in the September 1996 issue of PS: Political Science & Politics.

More recently, medical professionals, international participants and two additional federal executives have been selected for the program. They are as follows.
