CALL FOR EDITORS: JOURNAL OF POLITICAL SCIENCE EDUCATION

APPLICATIONS DUE SEPTEMBER 1, 2021

The American Political Science Association (APSA) invites applications and nominations for editorship of the Journal of Political Science Education (JPSE) to begin a term on August 1, 2022. Since 2017, APSA has been the official sponsor of JPSE, which is made available to the 10,000 members of the association. The journal currently receives approximately 120 submissions per year from all areas of political science education, including scholarship of teaching and learning, political science instruction, teaching, book and resource reviews, and reflections.

JPSE is an intellectually rigorous, peer-reviewed journal that publishes evidence-based and theoretically informed scholarship on teaching and pedagogical issues in political science. It aims to represent a full range of empirical and philosophical questions, issues, and approaches relevant to political science education at the two-year community college, four-year college, university, master's, and PhD levels. The journal supports research that engages with the broad scholarship of teaching and learning and improves the quality of teaching and learning in the discipline.

The editorship is a four-year term beginning on August 1, 2022, with the possibility of a two-year renewal with the approval of the APSA Council. A Search Committee has been formed to help select the editor, who will then be submitted to the Publications Committee for APSA Council approval, and the selected applicant(s) will be contacted shortly thereafter. We welcome applications from all interested parties and nominations of qualified candidates. Please direct any questions or nominations to Jon Gurstelle, APSA Publishing Director at jgurstelle@apsanet.org or Amanda Rosen, Chair of the Search Committee at amanda.rosen@unswc.edu. Applications should be submitted to Jon Gurstelle at jgurstelle@apsanet.org.

The deadline for applications is September 1, 2021.
