Archaeology from the Earth

SIR MORTIMER WHEELER

'The interest of the present book lies in the fact that its author has himself developed and perfected the technique of excavation and carried it forward to a point beyond that reached before and elsewhere. . . . and it is superbly written.' Times Literary Supplement.

'There is no one in the world better qualified to write on archaeological techniques . . .' Jacquetta Hawkes in the Sunday Times.

Sir Mortimer Wheeler's

NEW BOOK

ROME

BEYOND THE IMPERIAL FRONTIERS

This book is a new and concise survey of Roman adventuring far beyond the political frontiers of the Roman world. Fresh discovery has enlarged our knowledge of the astonishing spread of things Roman from Ireland to China, and some of the new information has not hitherto been readily accessible. A part of it is derived from the author's own explorations and excavations in India, Pakistan, and Afghanistan.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN: 'The time was now ripe for a general survey of the problem, and that is what Sir Mortimer Wheeler has given us in this fascinating and admirably illustrated book.'

Lavishly illustrated with 60 subjects on 40 plates, and with maps and drawings. Price 25s. net

PHOTOGRAPHY FOR ARCHAEOLOGISTS

M · B · COOKSON

Foreword by Sir Mortimer Wheeler. This is the first book to set out in detail the skilled techniques required in photographing archaeological sites; it will become a standard work. It is not a textbook on the camera – or on the theory of optics, chemistry or the properties of light. Its purpose is rather to place in the hands of site supervisors and students a simple approach to photography as applied to archaeology, and in this respect it is intensely practical. The author, who is instructor in photography at the Institute of Archaeology, University of London, is probably the best and most experienced archaeological photographer in the world, and he has included a wealth of practical advice and hints based on his many years' experience. The 25 photographs illustrate the pitfalls to be avoided by the student or practitioner, and there is a useful index.

Large Crown 8vo. 124 pp. plus 12 pp. of illustrations. Net 15s.

PALACE OF MINOS KNOSSOS

J · D · S · PENDLEBURY

Foreword by Sir Arthur Evans. Introduction by Sir John Myres and Sir John Forsdyke. For many years the famous 'Pendlebury', the only guide in English to the exciting discoveries at Knossos, has been unobtainable. This is the 'new Pendlebury', published, in association with the British School of Archaeology at Athens, after many requests from travellers and archaeologists. It has been completely re-designed and re-set, and a new introductory chapter gives a brilliant short sketch of Minoan history and culture, including an account of the recent archaeological discoveries. The guide itself recounts the architectural history of the Palace of Minos, and takes the reader on a grand tour of the Palace and its dependencies. There are 25 fine photographs, 7 plans of the site and its surroundings, a key plan of the Palace and a map of Crete.

Demy 8vo. 90 pp. Net 12s. 6d.
