

fession as Almond, Dahl, Key, Truman, and Ward. Under Herring's direction, the SSRC sought generally to improve the quality of social science knowledge by encouraging the gathering of more and better data, the application of more rigorous analytic methods, and the development of systematic theories with predictive power.

There was at least one other career, for which Herring has already been honored by this Association. He was a public servant both for the United States and the United Nations, and in 1979 received the Merriam Award for his contribution to the application of political science to problems of public policy. Here his contributions ranged from advice to the War Department on how to manage the official histories of World War II to service as head of the secretariat of the U.N. Atomic Energy Commission during the attempt in 1946 to negotiate an international control agreement to a role in the redevelopment of Pennsylvania Avenue and the founding of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars at the Smithsonian Institution.

A merchant mariner in his youth, a writer of sonnets all his life, Herring is a humanist whose chief work, the book on parties, is illustrated not with charts and graphs, but with American political art: a political meeting portrayed by Thomas Hart Benton in a New Deal-era mural in the State House at Jefferson City, Missouri; four paintings—Stump Speaking, County Election, Canvassing for a Vote, and Verdict of the People—by George Caleb Bingham from the 1850s; and Election Night by John Sloan, among others. The fine collection of American political art housed at APSA headquarters came from him as a gift to the Association.

Yet if Herring was not a user of quantitative methods, he did a great deal to spread their use. His was a career of astonishing eclecticism, spanning science and literature; government, academe, and the big foundations; all of the disciplines of social science; and the generations, methods and fields of political science. Distinguished Americans of the eighteenth century, including the one for whom this prize is named, would be at home in his sitting room in Princeton and in the adjacent garden; and they would agree that he merits this recognition from his colleagues.

APSA Awards and Recipients

Compiled by Jean Walen

One of the most important activities of the Association is the promotion and recognition of scholarly excellence in political science. Listed below are the recipients of each APSA award who were honored for the high quality of their work and their contributions to the discipline. A cumulative list of the award winners will be published every three years in conjunction with the Madison Award.

*"Affiliation" indicates the recipient's affiliation at the time of receiving the award.

Administrative Committee, Sabbatical Leave

President Huntington reported on the September 1 meeting of the Administrative Committee and reviewed the following sabbatical leave policy approved by the Administrative Committee:

This policy applies to all full-time professional employees of the Association. Professional employees are those holding a Ph.D. in political science or its equivalent.

The purpose of allowing sabbatical leaves is to enhance the professional and scholarly credentials of Association professional personnel. Sabbatical leave is not an entitlement nor may a cash benefit be given in lieu of leave. A person taking sabbatical leave is expected to return to the employ of the Association for at least one year thereafter.

Applications for sabbatical leave must be approved by the Administrative Committee of the Council to assure that the proposed activities are consonant with the purposes of sabbatical leave as stated in this policy and to assure that the timing of the proposed leave will not jeopardize Association responsibilities. Ordinarily, application for sabbatical leave should be made at least six months before the start of the proposed leave.

The Executive Director shall be entitled to a sabbatical leave of six months at full pay or 12 months at half pay after the completion of six years.

Other professional staff members may apply to the Administrative Committee for sabbatical leave of three months at full pay or six months at half pay beginning after the completion of six years of service to the Association. They should include in their application a description of their proposed activities during their leave and an explanation of how these activities will contribute to their professional develop-
