

Contributors

Felicia Ackerman, Ph.D., is Professor of Philosophy in the Department of Philosophy, Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island. A recipient of an O'Henry award, many of her published short stories deal with issues in medical ethics.

Howard Brody, M.D., Ph.D., is Director of the Center for Ethics and Humanities in the Life Sciences and Professor, Family Practice and Philosophy, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan.

Lawrence D. Brown, Ph.D., is Professor and Division Head of the Division of Health Policy and Management at the Columbia School of Public Health, New York City, New York.

David A. Buehler, M.Div., M.A., is founder of Bioethika Online Publishers and also serves as Chaplain to the University Lutheran Ministry of Providence, Rhode Island.

Arthur Caplan, Ph.D., is Director of the Center for Bioethics, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Gene Cohen, M.D., Ph.D., is Director of the Center on Aging, Health, and the Humanities at the George Washington University, where he is also Professor of Health Care Sciences and Professor of Psychiatry. He was elected President of the Gerontological Society of America, 1996–1997.

Robert M. Cook-Deegan, M.D., is Director of the National Cancer Policy Board, National Academy of Sciences and Institute of Medicine. He wrote The Gene Wars: Science, Politics and the Human Genome (WW Norton, 1994) after working at the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment where he directed several policy projects on Alzheimer's disease and on human genetics.

William J. Ellos, S.J., Ph.D., is a Clinical Professor in the Department of Medicine at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio and a Fellow of the MacLean Center for Clinical Medical Ethics at the University of Chicago.

Mark Fox, M.D., Ph.D., is a Resident in Medicine and Pediatrics at the University of Rochester. Formerly he was Director of the Vanderbilt Transplant Ethics Program, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee.

Ronald M. Green, Ph.D., is the John Phillips Professor of Religion and Director of the Ethics Institute at Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire. During 1996 and 1997 he served as Director of the Office of Genome Ethics at the National Institutes of Health's National Center for Human Genome Research.

Contributors

This office organized the GenEthics Consortium discussion of the Silver Years case.

Kenneth V. Iserson, M.D., M.B.A., is Professor of Surgery (Emergency Medicine), Director of the Program in Bioethics, and Chair of the Bioethics Committee at the University of Arizona College of Medicine, Tucson.

Rev. Richard A. McCormick, S.J., is the John A. O'Brien Professor of Christian Ethics in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Notre Dame, Indiana.

Glenn McGee, Ph.D., is a member of the Senior Faculty at the Center for Bioethics and Assistant Professor in the School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Daniel A. Moros, M.D., is Associate Professor of Neurology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine, CUNY. He teaches and writes on bioethics and the philosophy and history of medicine.

Joan O'Sullivan, J.D., is a Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of Maryland Law School, where she teaches the health and elder law clinic in which attorneys represent indigent clients. She has written and spoken about adult guardianship, healthcare decisionmaking, nursing home law, and ethical considerations in representing elderly clients.

Stephen Post, Ph.D., is Principal Investigator on a project entitled "Ethics, Genetics, and Alzheimer Disease," funded by the Ethical, Legal, and Social Implications Program of the National Human Genome Research Institute. He is Associate Director for Educational Programs at the Center for Biomedical Ethics, School of Medicine, Case Western Reserve University, and the author of The Moral Challenge of Alzheimer Disease (The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1995).

Rosamond Rhodes, Ph.D., is Associate Professor of Medical Education and Director of Bioethics Education at Mount Sinai School of Medicine, CUNY. She is editor of the American Philosophical Association Newsletter on Philosophy and Medicine.

Allen Roses, M.D., is Vice President and Worldwide Director, Genetics, at Glaxo Wellcome. He directed the Alzheimer's Disease Research Center at Duke University Medical Center, and during his 27 years at Duke, contributed more than 400 peer review articles, many on the genetics of neurological diseases.

Kenneth Schaffner, M.D., Ph.D., is University Professor of Medical Humanities at the George Washington University, Washington, D.C., and is currently engaged in research on conceptual and ethical issues in behavioral and psychiatric genetics.

Lawrence J. Schneiderman, M.D., is a Professor in the Department of Family and Preventive Medicine, University of California, San Diego.

Carson Strong, Ph.D., is Professor of Medical Ethics in the Department of Human Values and Ethics at the College of Medicine, University of Tennessee, Memphis.

A. Mathew Thomas is studying law at Harvard University. During 1996 and 1997 he served as Deputy Director of the Office of Genome Ethics at the National Institutes of Health's National Center for Human Genome Research.

Contributors

Leigh Turner, Ph.D., is Assistant Professor in the Joint Centre for Bioethics and the Department for the Study of Religion at the University of Toronto. He also serves as bioethicist at the Sunnybrook Health Science Centre and the Baycrest Centre for Geriatric Care, Toronto.

Allen Verhey, Ph.D., is the Evert and Hattie E. Blekkink Professor of Religion at Hope College, Holland, Michigan.

Noam J. Zohar, Ph.D., is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Philosophy, Bar Ilan University, Ramat Gan, Israel, teaching Rabbinic Thought, Moral and Political Philosophy, and courses in Ethics and Halakha. He is the author of Alternatives in Jewish Bioethics and co-editor of a forthcoming multivolume work, The Jewish Political Tradition.