

Call for papers: NJL Special Issue on Aspect

The second issue of Volume 20 (2007) of the Nordic Journal of Linguistics will be a special issue on Aspect. The guest editors are Raffaella Folli (University of Ulster), Heidi Harley (University of Arizona) and Britta Jensen (University of Cambridge).

Over the past twenty years, the investigation of (grammatical and lexical) aspect has given rise to a very rich body of work in many languages. With this special issue, we would like to create the opportunity for a deeper understanding of both lexical aspect and grammatical aspect in the Nordic languages (which include both the five Scandinavian languages, Danish, Faroese, Icelandic, Norwegian and Swedish, and at least three non-Scandinavian ones, namely Finnish, Greenlandic and Saami). We also hope to encourage the investigation of the relation between the lexical aspect and the grammatical aspect, a topic which until now has received much less attention.

It is well-known that both types of aspect interact closely with a great range of different linguistic phenomena, such as tense, nominals, adverbials (including temporal clauses), quantification, and discourse structure.

For this special issue of NJL we welcome papers addressing any issue related to aspect in any of the Nordic languages from a variety of perspectives (e.g. syntax, semantics, pragmatics, historical linguistics and psycholinguistics).

The deadline for submission is 31 January 2007. Papers should be sent to one of the following two guest editors:

Raffaella Folli
School of Communication
University of Ulster
Newtownabbey
Co. Antrim BT37 0Q
Great Britain
r.folli@ulster.ac.uk

Heidi Harley
Department of Linguistics
University of Arizona
Douglass 200E
Tucson, AZ 85721-0028
U.S.A.
hharley@email.arizona.edu