

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

NORMAN E. BOWIE is professor emeritus at the University of Minnesota, where he was Elmer L. Andersen Chair in Corporate Responsibility. The focus of his work in business ethics has been on the application of Kant's moral philosophy to business. His book on that topic, Business Ethics: A Kantian Perspective, has been translated into Chinese and Japanese. His co-edited text Ethical Theory and Business will soon be in its ninth edition. He is past president of the Society for Business Ethics and former associate editor of BEQ. He recently published his first trade book, Business Ethics for Dummies, co-authored with Meg Schneider. E-mail nbowie@umn.edu.

RUTGER CLAASSEN is assistant professor of political philosophy in the Institute of Political Science at Leiden University. He received his PhD in 2008 at Utrecht University for a dissertation on the moral limits of the market. His main research interests are on the intersection of ethics and economics, issues of distributive justice, and the capability approach. He is currently working on a three-year project funded by the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (NWO) on the regulation of markets. E-mail: claassenrjg@fsw.leidenuniv.nl.

CEDRIC E. DAWKINS is professor of management at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona. His research interests are in the areas of ethics, corporate disclosure, and the intersection of ethics with labor and social issues. He received his PhD in management from Ohio State University, and his B.S and M.A. in interpersonal communication from Ohio University. He has published research in Business Ethics Quarterly, the Journal of Business Ethics, and Business & Society, among others. E-mail: cedawkins@csupomona.edu.

TAE WAN KIM is a doctoral candidate at the Wharton School of Business at University of Pennsylvania. He is to graduate in August 2012 and will become an assistant professor at the Tepper School of Business at Carnegie Mellon University in September. He writes about Confucian business ethics and normative ethical theory more broadly. E-mail: taewan@wharton.upenn.edu.

DARYL KOEHN is a professor in the Ethics and Business Law Department at the University of St. Thomas in Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minnesota. She has published widely in the fields of ethics and corporate governance. Her monographs include "The Ground of Professional Ethics"; "The Nature of Evil"; "Rethinking Feminist Ethics"; "Local Insights, Global Ethics"; and "Living with the Dragon: Thinking and Acting Ethically in a World of Unintended Consequences." In addition, she has published scores of articles in the Harvard Business Review, Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics, and numerous other journals. She consults regularly with major corporations and has been profiled in Time magazine and has appeared often on National Public Radio, PBS television stations, and in other venues. E-mail: koehnd@stthomas.edu.

SÉBASTIEN MENA is a post-doctoral fellow in strategic management and organization at the University of Alberta. He received his PhD in management from the University of Lausanne. His research interests lie in institutional evolution, change, and stability in the context of sustainability and corporate responsibility. He currently examines such processes in the areas of soft law, corporate governance and shareholder activism, business education, and ethical decision-making. E-mail: smena@ualberta.ca.

LISA H. NEWTON is professor emerita of philosophy, founding director of the Program in Applied Ethics, and founding director of the Program in Environmental Studies at Fairfield University in Fairfield, Connecticut. She has authored more than seventy articles on ethics in politics, law, medicine, and business. She is a past president of the Society for Business Ethics and of the American Society for Value Inquiry, and she consults with several regional health care providers, corporations, and professional associations. E-mail: lhnewton@fairfield.edu.

BARRY L. PADGETT is professor of management and James M. Medlin Chair of Business Ethics in the College of Business Administration at Belmont University. He received his BA from the University of Mobile, his MA from the University of Louisville, and his PhD from Purdue University. In addition to numerous articles in professional journals including the Journal of Legal, Ethical and Regulatory Issues, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Academy of Marketing Studies Journal, he has authored two books, the most recent being Professional Morality and Guilty Bystanding: Merton's Conjectures and the Value of Work (Cambridge Scholars, 2009). E-mail: barry.padgett@belmont.edu.

GUIDO PALAZZO is professor of business ethics at the University of Lausanne (Switzerland). He graduated in business administration at the University of Bamberg (Germany) and earned his PhD in political philosophy (1999) from the University of Marburg (Germany). His research interests are in corporate social responsibility, corporate branding, democratic theory, and organizational ethics. He is associate editor of Business Ethics Quarterly and European Management Review and member of the editorial board of Academy of Management Review, Journal of Management Studies, and Business & Society. His work has appeared in journals such as Academy of Management Review, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Journal of Management Studies. Homepage: <http://www.hec.unil.ch/people/gpalazzo>; e-mail: guido.palazzo@unil.ch.

MARY RAU-FOSTER graduated from Grady Memorial School of Nursing, earned a BS in allied health at Georgia State University, an MBA at the University of St. Francis, and her JD at Atlanta Law School. She is a certified workplace mediation trainer and has earned certification in alternative dispute resolution, and has been an international speaker on business, ethics, management, and conflict resolution topics. Her writing has been published in medical and business publications including The American Journal of Nursing, Contemporary Dialysis and Nephrology, and Williamson Business Magazine. E-mail: mary.raufoster@belmont.edu.

ALAN STRUDLER is a professor in the Department of Legal Studies and Business Ethics at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania. He is the coordinator for the department's PhD program. He serves as associate editor for Business Ethics Quarterly. Strudler's current work interprets practices of truthfulness in business. His writing appears in Journal of Philosophy, Philosophy & Public Affairs, UCLA Law Review, and other journals. E-mail: strudler@wharton.upenn.edu.

BARRY WILBRATTE is acting dean of the Cameron School of Business at the University of St. Thomas-Houston, where he previously served as professor of economics and finance. He has published in the fields of labor economics, monetary economics, macroeconomics, international trade, corporate finance, and investment theory. Journals in which he has published include the Journal of Finance, Journal of Money, Credit and Banking, Economic Inquiry, and Quarterly Review of Economics and Finance. E-mail: wilbratt@stthom.edu.

ALESSANDRA ZANARDO is a lecturer in corporate and business law at Ca' Foscari University of Venice and adjunct professor of patent and competition law at the University of Verona. She received her PhD from Bocconi University, Milan. She has been visiting research fellow at the Centre for Commercial Law Studies (CCLS) at Queen Mary, University of London. Her main research interests are in the areas of corporate governance, company law (including the international and comparative aspects of company law), and securities regulation. She has published a number of articles and a book. She currently focuses on gender diversity of corporate boards and on directors' liability. E-mail: alessandra.zanardo@unive.it.