

CONTRIBUTORS

RAD BORISLAVOV was ACLS New Faculty Fellow in the Slavic Department at Columbia University in 2013–15. He received his PhD from the University of Chicago in 2011. His interests lie in the areas of avant-garde and modernist culture, Russian formalism, cinema and visual art, the history of the Cold War, and contemporary Russia.

CHOI CHATTERJEE is professor of history at California State University, Los Angeles. She is the author of Celebrating Women: Gender, Festival Culture, and Bolshevik Ideology, 1910–1939 (University of Pittsburgh Press, 2002) and coauthor of The 20th Century: A Retrospective (Westview Press, 2002). She is the coeditor of Americans Experience Russia: Encountering the Enigma, 1917 to the Present (Routledge, 2013) and of Everyday Life in Russia: Past and Present (Indiana University Press, 2015). She is currently working on a monograph titled Disruptive Transnationalism, or What Happens When Russia Enters World History.

GEORGE GASZYNA is associate professor in the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures and the Program in Comparative and World Literature at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He specializes in modern Polish literature and researches and teaches continental modernism and the avant-garde, diasporic and heritage studies, and Jewish-Polish relations. His articles have appeared in Slavic Review, Canadian Slavonic Papers, Polish Review, Russian Literature, and Sarmatian Review, as well as in several anthologies. His first book, Polish, Hybrid, and Otherwise: Exilic Discourse in Joseph Conrad and Witold Gombrowicz, was published in 2011 with Continuum/Bloomsbury. A new book project, on modern Polish borderland and provincial writing, is underway.

ILYA GERASIMOV is cofounder and editor in chief of the international quarterly Ab Imperio. He is the author of numerous articles in several languages and three books, including Modernism and Public Reform in Late Imperial Russia: Rural Professionals and Self-Organization, 1905–30 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009). He has edited seven collections in the field of new imperial history, including Empire Speaks Out: Languages of Rationalization and Self-Description in the Russian Empire (Brill, 2009).

YAROSLAV HRYTSAK is professor of history at the Ukrainian Catholic University and the director of the Peter Jacyk Program for Studies of Modern Ukrainian History. He has taught at Columbia University, Harvard University, and Central European University. He is the author of numerous publications on modern eastern Europe history and has won various Ukrainian and foreign awards for academic achievement and public service.

GAYLE LONERGAN is a postdoctoral research fellow in the Higher School of Economics Center for Historical Research in St. Petersburg, Russia. Her previous work has focused on the Russian civil war, 1918–21, with a particular focus on the changes and continuities in the policies of the RSDP(b) and party recruitment in this period.

MARINA MOGILNER, an associate professor of history, holds the Edward and Marianna Thaden Chair in Russian and East European Intellectual History at the University of Illinois, Chicago. Since 1999, she has been a coeditor of Ab Imperio quarterly. She is the author of a number of monographs, including, most recently, Homo Imperii: A History of Physical Anthropology in Russia (University of Nebraska Press, 2013).

ANDRII PORTNOV is a guest professor at Humboldt University of Berlin, long-term fellow at the Forum Transregionale Studien Berlin, and director of the Berlin-Brandenburg Ukrainian Initiative. His latest book, Istoriï dlia domashn'oho vzhytku: Esei pro pol's'ko-rosiis'ko-ukraïns'kyi trykutnyk pam' iati (The Histories for Home Use: The Polish-Russian-Ukrainian Triangle of Memory), was published by the Kyiv-based publishing house Krytyka in 2013 and awarded the George Y. Shevelov Prize. He is currently working on a biography of the city of Ekaterinoslav-Dnipropetrovs'k.

JAMES RYAN is lecturer in Modern European/Russian History at Cardiff University. He is the author of Lenin's Terror: The Ideological Origins of Early Soviet State Violence (Routledge, 2012). He is currently working on a manuscript, initially funded by the Irish Research Council/Marie Curie COFUND, provisionally titled An Intellectual History of Soviet State Violence, 1918–1941.

TIMOTHY SNYDER is Housum Professor of History at Yale University, permanent fellow of the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna, and the author of six books of European history and the editor or coauthor of three more. His Black Earth: The Holocaust as History and Warning, was published by Crown Books in September.

EWA STAŃCZYK is teaching fellow in eastern European studies at the University of Amsterdam. She has parallel interests in Polish and east European literature, contemporary history, and anthropology. Her first book, Contact Zone Identities in the Poetry of Jerzy Harasymowicz, was published by Peter Lang in 2012. She is also the author of articles on Polish memory that have appeared in East European Politics and Societies and Central Europe, among other journals.

PATRICIA K. THURSTON is team leader of the Specialty Cataloging Team at Sterling Memorial Library, Yale University. She has been compiling the annual dissertations list for Slavic Review since 1997. In addition, she has written about collections of Romanian materials in research libraries in the United States. Her current work includes efforts to encourage the implementation of non-Latin scripts used in Russia, Central Asia, and other parts of the world in local and national cataloging environments.

MARIA TODOROVA is Gutzsell Professor of History at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. She specializes in the history of eastern Europe, with special emphasis on the Balkans and the Ottoman empire. Her publications include Remembering Communism: Private and Public Recollections of Lived Experience in Southeast Europe (Central European University Press, 2014), Postcommunist Nostalgia (Berghahn Books, 2010), Bones of Contention: The Living Archive of Vasil Levski and the Making of Bulgaria's National Hero (Central European University Press, 2009), Remembering Communism: Genres of Representation (Social Science Research Council, 2010), Balkan Identities: Nation and Memory (New York University Press, 2004), Imagining the Balkans (Oxford University Press, 1997), and Balkan Family Structure and the European Pattern: Demographic Developments in Ottoman Bulgaria (American University Press, 1993; Central European University Press, 2006), as well as articles on social and cultural history, historical demography, and historiography.