

tions which we have had at our annual meeting for the first time—I am not speaking of the members of our Association—but I must express my deep sense of obligation to Professor Fraser and to Professor Cunningham for the kindness with which they have placed before us such very magnificent preparations. And I have also to thank our Trans-Atlantic and Continental brethren for coming to the meeting and honouring us with their presence, and contributing to that expanse of the intellectual horizon which, I think, should be one great end of all our studies.

ADJOURNED ANNUAL MEETING.

An Adjourned Annual Meeting of the Association was held in the Psychological Section Room, at Bristol, on Tuesday, the 31st of July, 1894, under the presidency of Conolly Norman, F.R.C.P.I.

The PRESIDENT said that the first business was to receive the complete balance sheet of the Treasurer, and he called on Dr. Newington to present it.

Dr. NEWINGTON rose to present the completed balance sheet to the Association, but before reading it he desired to say a few words to give additional testimony to the value of Dr. Paul's long services to the Association. He had, even in the short time since he had been put into office, seen how much care and attention were required, and he could say that Dr. Paul had left everything easy for his successor. Moreover, he had done his work with such tact that though he must needs have had frequently the unpleasant duty of pressing for arrears, he had left behind him the most pleasant feelings. He wished further to say that of late years, since the business of the Association and the number of its members had increased rapidly, it had been necessary for Dr. Paul to look for a little clerical assistance. He had lately found a valuable coadjutor in Dr. Fennings, and he (Dr. Newington) took the opportunity of expressing his appreciation of Dr. Fennings' accuracy and clearness in setting out facts. As for himself, he was deeply sensible of the honour conferred on him, and the Association might rest assured that it would receive his best services. He then made some observations on the balance sheet, explaining some of the figures, as printed on page 698.
