

ŻELAZOWA WOLA

THE HISTORY

OF CHOPIN'S BIRTHPLACE

Mariola Wojtkiewicz

Żelazowa Wola is linked inseparably with Fryderyk Chopin: it is the place where the Polish composer entered the world two hundred years ago. Although the Chopins moved permanently to Warsaw when Fryderyk was still an infant, the whole family regularly returned to Żelazowa Wola on summer and church holidays.

Mariola Wojtkiewicz is the first to set in order the history of this place – from the moment when Ludwika Skarbek purchased the estate up to contemporary times. Drawing on extant documents, she has sought to verify and account for some of the widespread misconceptions relating to Żelazowa Wola and has introduced a number of new details and findings.

Żelazowa Wola. This history of Chopin's Birthplace, written in an accessible style and embellished with numerous illustrations, is meant for a broad readership with an interest in acquiring reliable knowledge that reflects the state of research into the history of Żelazowa Wola.

FRYDERYK CHOPIN

THE ORIGINS

Piotr Mysłakowski, Andrzej Sikorski

This book summarises more than a decade of work conducted by two researchers who set out to verify in archival sources the existing biographical information about Fryderyk Chopin, his family and his friends, and also to obtain new material to expand our knowledge of his ancestors. The research covered approximately 100,000 handwritten legal documents from Kuyavia, Mazovia and Royal Prussia, numerous printed and cartographic sources, and also the subject literature. The majority of sources held in Polish archives were examined, as well as information from France and Russia.

As a result of their research, the authors were able to refute many of the myths and false convictions persistently recurring in the Chopin literature. They have also described the newly-discovered fortunes of Fryderyk Chopin's Polish ancestors and significantly broadened our knowledge of his French roots.

Particularly interesting proved to be their research into the circumstances that brought the young Nicolas Chopin, the composer's father, to Poland.

This book, presenting the most up-to-date historical findings, also shows the influence of Fryderyk's hometown of Warsaw from 1815 to 1830 on the formation of the young composer's personality.

A Swallow's Shadow

RYSZARD PRZYBYLSKI

Owing to the thorough and somewhat visionary work of Ryszard Przybylski, who unraveled the hidden meaning of the words, we are able to imagine, e.g., what were either the reasons why Chopin chose an extremely elegant and dignified dress code, or how he was able to furnish the space surrounding his spirit while furnishing his apartments. The book will guide us through the maze of changing emotional states of the composer, and it will say a lot about who he was and how he felt up to the end – also when passing away.

Cambridge Opera Journal

Editors

Suzanne Aspden, University of Oxford, UK

Steven Huebner, McGill University, Canada

For over twenty years the Cambridge Opera Journal has been the pre-eminent forum for scholarship on opera in all its manifestations. The Journal publishes essays not only on all aspects of the European operatic tradition, but also on American opera and musical theatre, on non-Western music theatres, on contemporary opera production, and on the theory and historiography of opera. Carefully researched and often illustrated with music examples and pictures, articles adopt a wide spectrum of critical approaches. As well as major articles, each issue includes reviews of recent important publications in the field.

twentieth-century music

Editor

Charles Wilson, Cardiff University, UK

twentieth-century music is a unique publication dedicated to leading research on all aspects of the music of the twentieth century - a period which may be interpreted flexibly to encompass, where appropriate, music from the late-nineteenth century to the early years of the twenty-first. The journal explores Western art music, music from non-Western traditions, popular music, film music, jazz, improvised music, and performance practice. Whilst it does not style itself as revisionist, the journal is guided by the principle that existing assumptions about twentieth-century music and the ways in which it has been and is currently studied should be rigorously examined and re-examined.

Tempo

Editor

Calum MacDonald, Gloucestershire, UK

Tempo is the premier English-language journal devoted to twentieth-century and contemporary concert music. Literate and scholarly articles, often illustrated with music examples, explore many aspects of the work of composers throughout the world. Written in an accessible style, approaches range from the narrative to the strictly analytical. Tempo frequently ventures outside the acknowledged canon to reflect the diversity of the modern music scene. Issues feature interviews with leading contemporary composers, a tabulated news section, and lively and wide-ranging reviews of recent recordings, books and first performances around the world. Selected issues also contain specially-commissioned music supplements.

Guidelines for contributors

Submissions, and any communication concerning published articles or reviews, should be sent to the General Editor:

Professor Bennett Zon, School of Music, Durham University, Palace Green, Durham DH1 3RL, UK.
Email: bennett.zon@durham.ac.uk

Electronic submissions are welcomed as email attachments in Word (.doc or .docx files). Contributors should also send three hard copies. Receipt of the former will be acknowledged.

Submissions should be typewritten on one side only and double-spaced throughout. Pages, including those containing illustrative material, should be numbered sequentially. The article file should be ready for blind review and must bear no trace of the author's identity. The author's details (name, affiliation, email address and postal address) should be supplied either in the email or in a separate file. All copies should include the date of submission clearly visible on each page of the article, as either a header or footer.

Each article should be submitted with an abstract of 100 words. Articles will not be published unless an abstract is provided. A biographical note of around 75 words should also be supplied, on a separate cover sheet.

Articles submitted to the journal should in general be between 6,000 and 9,000 words long. Submissions in languages other than English will not be rejected, but every effort should be made by non-native speakers of English to have their final draft checked by a colleague who is a native speaker of English. Manuscripts may be sent back to the author(s) if serious language deficiencies remain in the text. Translations of published articles will be considered. Articles and book reviews will be checked and copy-edited for journal style and UK English.

Further details are available in the Instructions for Contributors available at: <http://journals.cambridge.org/ncm>

Submission of a paper will be taken to imply that it is unpublished (in English) and is not being considered for publication elsewhere. Upon acceptance of a paper, the author will be asked to assign copyright (on certain conditions) to Cambridge University Press. Contributors are responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce any material in which they do not hold copyright and for ensuring that the appropriate acknowledgements are included in their manuscript.

Nineteenth-Century Music Review is a peer-reviewed journal. All submissions are reviewed by at least two members of the editorial board and at least one independent reviewer. While under review, the identity of the author of the submission is known only to the General Editor.

Themed Issues

The General Editor of Nineteenth-Century Music Review encourages proposals from individuals with ideas for themed issues, involving the commissioning of up to six main articles per issue, as well as one or more review articles for coverage of books, CDs, DVDs and scores. Those applying to the journal for this purpose should initially provide the General Editor with a statement of no more than 500 words, outlining the thematic nature of the proposed issue, the names of contributing authors along with a working title for their papers, and a timetable for submission of work.

Proposers of themed issues work alongside the General Editor, and are designated Guest Editors. They are responsible for commissioning, organizing and preparing articles for publication, as well as working closely with review editors to locate suitable material and authors for relevant sections of the journal. Review sections of themed issues are not exclusively thematicised, and tend towards a balance of half themed, and half general material.

Articles commissioned for themed issues follow the same process of peer review as general issues. No guarantee of publication can be given.

This journal issue has been printed on FSC-certified paper and cover board. FSC is an independent, non-governmental, not-for-profit organization established to promote the responsible management of the world's forests. Please see www.fsc.org for information.
